New Law Lets U.S. Step Up Spying on Foreign Diplomats

By Robert C. Toth

Los Angeles Times Service WASHINGTON — A new federai law permits the United States to vasily improve its watch on foreign diplomats here, even to plac-ing spies in their embassies and homes. The law takes effect Friday.

Officials said the law was deliberately designed to cover the same costly and harassing practices used ty the Soviet agency through which diplomats in Moscow must deal in hiring translators and maids, contract for apartments, buy airline tickets and acquire other services.

The Soviet agency, the Administration for Services to the Diplomatic Corps, is ostensibly part of the Soviet Foreign Ministry. But in fact, according to U.S. intelligence officials, it is under the Soviet searet police, or KGB. Through the agency, Soviet spies are placed in oreign embassies and homes.

Now, for the first time, the United States will be able to provide comparable "services" to Soviet diplomats here through a new Office of Foreign Missions in the U.S. intelligence officials said they were pleased with the opportunities the new law provides. "We're delighted," an official said. Another said: "It should be very helpful to counterintelligence

President Ronald Reagan signed the legislation Aug. 24 as part of the State Department appropriauons bill. In a two-page statement, he referred only briefly to the Forrigh Missions Act, saying it "provides authority to regulate the ac-tivities of foreign missions in our country, in order to promote re-ciprocity in our diplomatic relationships and to protect our national security."

Administration officials were more explicit in their arguments to persuade Congress to enact the law. Besides permitting tit-for-tat reciprocity aimed at improving the welfare of U.S. diplomats abroad, the administration promised, the measure would "increase the capability of national security agencies to oversee foreign government ac-tivities in the United States," The administration's bill was en-

Camp Assaults Laid to Top Phalangist Chiefs

DAMASCUS — The operation that started in the Chatila refugee camp in Beirut and resulted in the massacre of more than 300 civil-Phalangist military commanders and involved the elite corps of the militia, according to Phalangist and Western diplomatic sources in President Amin Gemayel, according to these sources, is not believed to have known much about the operation. Although he was in the Phalangist leadership and now heads the party, he was effectively excluded from its military circle and was apparently not involved in the planning.

His brother, Bashir, who had been elected president before him and was assassinated Sept. 14, said before his death that he planned to disband the Christian militia and strengthen the regular Lebanese Army, which is a separate force of about 22,000 men. From the information supplied by the sources, it could not be determined whether the massacre that occurred after the troops went in was planned from the begin-

Christian political and military leaders and Western diplomatic and intelligence officials said in interviews that a key leader of the attack was Elias Hobeika, a trusted aide of Bashir Gernayel, Mr. Hobeika is chief of security and intelligence for the Phalangist force of more than 12,000 rightist Christian militiamen, which is now gation — an investigation that

The informants said the other leaders of the operation that led to the massacre included Joseph Edde, commander of the militia forces in southern Lebanon; Dib Anastas, chief of the Phalangist military police; Michel Zouein, a close aide to Mr. Hobeika and the man who led a successful attack in 1980 against the rival Christian militia of former President Camille Chamoun, and Marun Mishalani, a Phalangist commander in East

The roughly 2,000 soldiers commanded by the men named above represent the best-trained core of the Phalangist militia, according to Lebanese Christian informant with knowledge of the milita's organization

The accounts contradicted earlier reports that the troops who carried out the massacre were hreakaway soldiers from irregular units. In addition, most of those inter-viewed said they did not believe that Major Saad Haddad, the Is-raeli-backed leader of another militia that operates mainly in southern Lebanon, or his troops played an important tole in the massacre. Western diplomats and high-ranking Christian rightist politicians have said that they are in-clined to accept Major Haddad's

The origins of the massacre, and what has happened since it occurred are still shrouded in secrecy. On Tuesday afternoon diplomats in Beirut told this reporter and Loren Jenkins of The Washington Post that intelligence reports had confirmed a threat on the two reporters' lives because of the questions both had been asking Phalangist officials. Wednesday morning, the two correspondents were driven through Phalangist lines along the Beirut-Damascus highway into Syrian-held territory.

With comparable dangers in mind, most sources who supplied information on the Phalangist role in the massacre did so with the understanding that they would not be named. Such information as exists is fragmentary. Sharon's Account

According to one Western diplomat in Beirut, a high-ranking Leb-anese Army officer said the plan for Christian militiamen to enter the camps had been discussed for some time between Israeli and Christian officers — that it had been outlined, in fact, before the assassination of Bashir Gemayel. Although the Israelis gave the Phalangists the go-ahead to enter the camps, there is no conclusive evidence that they knew the Phalangists were going to kill the civilians.

The Israeli defense minister. Ariel Sharon, suggested in a recent statement to parliament that the plan was worked out on WednesGemayel's assassination and shortly after Israeli troops began moving into West Beirut.

according to Western intelligence sources, Mr. Sharon met several times with Bashir Gemayel in the back room of East Beirut's elegant Retro Restaurant. What they dis-cussed has not been disclosed. The Lebanese Army officer said that originally, the Christians were to have occupied the camps on Sept. 24. The plan, he said, may have been speeded up after the assassi-

Other sources in Beirut said the original purpose of the operation in the camps had been not only to fight, disarm and arrest or execute any remaining Palestinian guerril-las but also to frighten Lebanon's Palestinians into leaving all their camps and then Lebanon itself. A similar report was published in the Hebrew-language newspaper Ha'aretz in Israel.

Mr. Sharon told the Knesset that the general staff and commander in chief of the Phalangists met twice with Israel's ranking generals on Sept. 15 and discusse entering the camps, which they did the next afternoon.

The commander in chief of the Phalangist militia is named Fuad Ephraim. Mr. Ephraim, who is married to the daughter of one of Bashir Gemayel's sisters, was Mr. Gemayel's choice to replace him as head of Lebanon's largest Christian militia. Sharon Reportedly Predicted Massacre Before Israeli Move

By Edward Walsh Washington Post Service

JERUSALEM — Defense Minister Ariel Sharon of Israel expressed grave concern that Chris-tian Phalangist militiamen would massacre Palestinian civilians shortly before the Israeli Army was ordered to send the Phalange militia units into the Chatila and Sabra refugee camps in West Bearut, it was learned Thursday.

The predictions of a potential bloodbath were made while Mr. Sharon and other senior Israeli officials were pressing for the dispatch of regular Lebanese Army units into the refugee neighborhoods to root out armed Palestinian guerrillas.

They argued that the assassination of the Phalangist leader, President-elect Bashir Gemayel, greatly increased the danger that the Christian militanien would renew their extents on the Palestrician. their attacks on the Palestinians.

Mr. Sharon has publicly maintained that he and other Israeli of-ficials never dreamed that the Phalange militia units would go on a rampage of indiscriminate killing once they were inside the camps.

But well-informed sources said that the defense minister and the army's chief of staff, General Rafael Eitan, raised the prospect of just such a slaughter the night of Sept. 16.

It was on this night that, with the blessing of Prime Minister Menachem Begin and the Israeli cabinet, Israeli Army units in West Beirut were ordered to assist the Phalange militiamen in entering

In the eyes of many, the mill, a $55-million investment by Fieldcrest Mills of North Carolina and the Irish Development Authority, was symbolic of the new Ireland. Its modern looms were operated by skilled technicians, many of whom had left secure jobs in English industrial cities or, in some cases, were recruited from as far away as Anstralia.

The technicians were, for the most part, realizing the dream of all economic exiles: returning to the land of their birth to a goodpaying job, settling down and making the pledge that Kilkenny was where they would spend the Hushed late-night talks like these are taking place in the first days of autumn all over Europe. There are millions of young and middle-age workers who have no assurance that they will be able to find permanent work again for years, a cold fact that is being acknowledged even by politicians, some of whom are also joining the ranks of the unemployed as govemments in Europe fall on economic issues.

It happened in Ireland last winter, and many believe it will happen again if there is a politician who has a better solution beyond the wavering attempts to cut public spending and pare deficits. Ireland, despite an investment and land boom in the last two decades, has always been looked on as

Italy, France Agree With Reagan on Terms For Beirut Withdrawal

By Bernard D. Nossiter New York Times Service

UNITED NATIONS, New York - The Italian and French foreign ministers have agreed with Presi-dent Ronald Reagan that their joint force with the United States is likely to stay in Beirut until all other foreign troops leave Leba-

Emilio Colombo, the Italian foreign minister, told a reporter Wednesday that the force's departure is "tied to a fact, not to a date." That fact, he made clear, is "the evacuation of the foreign forces, Syrian and Israeli," and he urged that "it must take place in a short time."

Claude Cheysson, the French external relations minister, was slightly more cautious. At a breakfast meeting Wednesday with the press, he said it was not unlikely that the multinational force would remain until the foreign troops left. But he stressed that this was up to the Lebanese government.

Mr. Colombo said, "I agree" when asked his view of Mr. Reagan's forecast at a news conference on Tuesday. The president then said the joint force would stay until the foreigners left.

The Italian minister said he told the U.S. secretary of state, George P. Shultz, Wednesday morning that "the evacuation of all foreign

Mr. Shultz said there was "no contradiction between permanent peace for Israel and the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people." He said "neither can be achieved without the other.'

In his first address to the UN General Assembly as secretary of state, Mr. Shultz called on all parties to the Arab-Israeli conflict "to accept President Reagan's challenge and hasten the realization of true peace in the Middle East."

The removal of Israeli, Syrian and PLO troops must not become an element in the Middle East peace process, Mr. Colombo said. "Otherwise, that negotiation be-comes more complicated and it is complicated enough."

Mr. Cheysson dealt at length with the next step in Lebanon, that of assuring Israel a secure northern border once its troops depart. This task, he said, should be undertaken by UN peacekeepers and not troops operating outside the United Nations' aegis. Israel has insisted that its border security cannot be entrusted to UN forces and should be carried out by U.S. and

Mr. Ephraim became especially decisive after the assassination, according to Mr. Ghostine, when it was decided that the Lebanese forces should stay home or in their harracks rather than respond by taking up arms.

Several other sources who have had dealings with both Mr. Ephraim and Mr. Hobeika insisted that the intelligence chief, though only 28 years old, was the more formidable of the two and that Mr. Ephraim had probably been placed in charge of the militia in the expectation that Bashir Gemayel would keep making its decisions after assuming the presi-

GENEVA — U.S. and Soviet negotiators resumed talks Thursday on reducing intermediate-range nuclear weapons, but they gave no signs

Of Bonn Vote that a breakthrough was imminent. The chief delegates, Yuli A. Kvitsinsky for the Soviet Union and Paul H. Nitze for the United States, exchanged greetings in English but refrained from public comment as they ended a two-month recess in their Nation's Course Steady negotiations, which have produced scant progress in the past 10 models.

The United States has proposed scrapping plans to deploy 572 intermediate-range nuclear weapons in Western Europe by late 1983 if the Russians dismantle SS-20, SS-5 and SS-4 missiles in Europe, Moscow has said that the offer is a ploy to deadlock the Geneva talks so that the U.S. weapons can be deployed.

Haig Calls State Dept. Job an Error

NEW YORK — In his first interview since resigning as secretary of state, Alexander M. Haig Jr. says he decided early in his tenure in the Reagan administration that it had been a mistake to take the job. Mr. Haig realized his error "fairly early on" when he found "opposition developing to one's views merely for the sake of opposing those views, and I began to conclude that was the case in certain instances."

Such unnecessary disagreements threatened the nation's security, Mr. Haig added in the interview, made Sept. 16 and acheduled Thursday night on ABC. When he resigned June 25, he gave no reason other than that U.S. foreign policy "was shifting from that careful course which we laid out" in the administration.

Soviet Turbines Loaded in Bremen

BREMEN, West Germany - Two turbines manufactured in West Germany for the Siberian gas pipeline were loaded overnight aboard a ship expected to leave soon for the Soviet Union, harbor sources said.

The turbines are aboard the Bremer Horst Bischoff, a West German ship that the owners said was bound for the Soviet Baltic port of Klaipeda. Diplomatic sources said the shipment would immediately trigger U.S. sanctions on AEG-Kanis, the manufacturers, in line with similar steps already taken against French, British and Italian firms. In Washington, the secretary of commerce, Malcolm Baldrige, said the United States would impose the same sanctions against West German companies supplying equipment for the pipeline as those applied to other European firms who have violated the embargo. They will probably consist of a temporary order barring AEG-Kanis, a subsidiary of the AEG electrical group, from access to U.S. gas technology.

Dutch Labor Quits Coalition Talks

THE HAGUE - A coalition between the Dutch Christian Democratic and Liberal parties became a virtual certainty Thursday after the formal withdrawal of the dominant Labor Party.

Jos Van Kemenade, the Labor Party mediator appointed by Queen Beatrix to explore coalition options, reported the failure of his mission Thursday evening, a spokesman for the queen said. Mr. Van Kemenade said negotiations on a Labor-Christian Democrat coalition broke down on the conflict over nuclear missiles that was the major issue in the election Sept. 8 in which labor came out ahead.

Thus the Labor Party, which unconditionally rejected the missiles, has failed for the second time to forge a coalition on the basis of an election victory. In 1974, Labor went into opposition after negotiations lasting 208 days. Mr. Van Kemenade said he had advised the queen to appoint a Christian Democratic mediator with a mandate for a coalition with the rightist Liberal Party.

The Economic Omelet

pile of expshells in the sink.

Mr. Reagan argues that the decline in in-flation in the past 20 months is a triumph of his economic policy, while the simultaneous rise in unemployment is to be ascribed solely In fact, inescapably, lower inflation and higher unemployment are the result of the same causes — high interest and a severe recession. Mr. Reagan would be on firmer ground if he simply pointed out that the improvement in inflation has been a good deal better, at a somewhat lower cost in jobs, than most people thought possible in January 1981. But the cost in jobs has been substantial, and the trouble with the present position is its instability. Neither Mr. Reagan nor anyone else wants to continue with unemployment at around 10 percent. Everyone is deeply anxious to see an economic recovery get under way. But the effects of the recession, on both prices and jobs, are entirely reversi-ble. Will a recovery bring higher inflation along with lower unemployment? That is what happened the last time, as the

The trade-off between more jobs and less inflation is as demonstrable now as it was a generation ago. The dilemma of the 1970s was that it took a progressively higher cost in one to achieve any improvement in the other. The relation between them is not a reliable seesaw, for there have been periods in which the United States has inadvertently which the United States has inadvertently succeeded in raising prices and unemployment together. But to make both go down together? That is much harder.

The Reagan administration has no brilliant new ideas, but neither has anyone else. America is on a track that implies continued unemployment at painfully high levels, as inflation slowly declines. People who press for faster progress on jobs have to acknowledge the inflationary side effects.

But, similarly, presidents who celebrate lower inflation at their news conferences are not permitted, by the same rules, to disavow

Democracy in Brazil ...

The General Assembly of the United Na-tions too often substitutes a windy ventilation of the silly or the obvious for serious diplomacy. But on Monday there were special reasons to pay heed to Brazil, by custom the first member of the assembly to speak.

Brazil's president, João Baptista Figueire-do, is a military ruler who says, refreshingly, that even a troubled democracy is worth more than a progressive dictatorship.

The plain-speaking general has for the most part been as good as his word since 1979, when he became the fifth in a parade of military rulers since the armed forces seized power in Brazil 18 years ago. Under his re-gime, political prisoners have been released, exiles have safely returned and censorship has been lifted. On Nov. 15, Brazilians will at last vote in free legislative and gubernatorial elections, for the first time since 1965, putting at risk the government's majority.

There has been some backsliding on President Figueiredo's promise of abertura, or opening. Most notable was the regime's un-wise attempt to jail Luis Inacio da Silva, the labor leader, for organizing a strike, and also to keep him out of the gubernatorial race in São Paulo. Overall, though, Brazil's return to democracy has been steady, if slow — in shaming contrast to the frozen tyrannies in neighboring Argentina, Chile and Uruguay.

To be sure, Brazil has the usual assortment of Third World miseries - roaring inflation, $80 billion in foreign debts and an awesome gap between haves and have-nots. Less com-mon aré Brazil's economic energy and its zest for politics. Its 125 million inhabitants are as ethnically diverse as the United Nations itself. As a theme for the new session of the General Assembly, abertura strikes us as just fine. President Figueiredo's record argues plainly against the demeaning view that poor nations are somehow fit only for tyranny.

... and Maybe in Bolivia

For more than a century and a half, coupprone Bolivia averaged a new president a year. Lately the pace has quickened. Since 1978 seven chief executives have come and gone, with an eighth now on his way out the door. The total does not include the one man democratically chosen by the Bolivian peo-ple, Hernán Siles Zuazo. Mr. Siles Zuazo's cheduled inauguration two years ago was blocked by a bloody military intervention.

The last two years have been catastrophic. The legal economy virtually collapsed under the pressure of rampant corruption, fed by the profits of the illegal cocaine trade. Some countries have shunned the La Paz regime for financial dereliction, others for drug trafficking, and still others for human rights violations, making Bolivia an international pariah. Washington at various times has objected to all three. The final blow came from Bolivia's unions, which this month braved repression to call a general strike against proposed austerity measures. Only a legitimately elected government now has any chance of repairing the economic damage.

The military rulers, getting the message at last, have called for the elected Congress to be reconvened. Although nothing can be cer-tain in Bolivian politics, that should result in Mr. Siles Zuazo finally being allowed to assume office. A few weeks ago the Reagan administration was reported to be thinking of resuming normal relations, pending an acceptable Bolivian economic plan. The latest turn, after diplomatic insistence from two U.S. administrations, suggests an important human rights lesson: Pressure helps.

-THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Other Opinion

Brazil's Trade Medicine

The decision of the Brazilian government to tighten controls on imports is the latest evidence that the government of Gen. Figueiredo is prepared to do what it can to avoid the sort of financial debacke that has engulfed Mexico this year. In doing this it has grasped some nettles which other developing coun-tries have hesitated or refused to grasp.

The task facing Brazil is daunting. The president [admits] that the country's foreign debt might reach $80 billion by the end of this year. The financial burden involved in servicing this huge sum is very heavy indeed.

Brazil's efforts to trade its way out of its problems should not be impeded by shortsighted protectionism on the part of the industrial countries. There are several unresolved trade disputes between Brazil and the United States, although the recent decision by the [U.S.] International Trade Commission not to raise barriers against a highly successful Brazilian-made commuter aircraft came as a welcome relief. To make Brazil's adjustment even more painful and difficult than it is already is not in the best interests of the industrial world.

Mrs. Gandhi Criticized

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's mission to Moscow, like her recent visit to the United States, has not enhanced her stature as a the leader of the world's largest democracy. [In the United States] she had the audacity to liken the Soviet Union's invasion of Afgha stan to the United States's involvement in El Salvador, No matter what Washington has done wrong in its relations with the Latin American nation, such an equation is both ridiculous and insulting.

Mrs. Gandhi is one of the few leaders of the free world who has not been conspicuous for expressions of public regret over the bloodbath Moscow is imposing on the Afghans. She broke this silence, just a wee bit, during talks with Soviet President Lenoid Brezhnev. She expressed "serious concern" over the presence of Russian soldiers on the sovereign soil of Afghanistan. Then she watered it down by saying there are "two sides to the problem." We wonder how the prime minister would explain this partial defense of the Russian invasion to the people being shot at in Afghanistan. The remark makes one wonder just how "serious" is her "concern."

Time for Ronald Reagan to Assess His Record

WASHINGTON — At the end of the American fiscal year and the beginning of another reappraisal of world politics at the United Nations, it would be helpful if President Reagan gave an account of his record as he sees it.

This he cannot do in press conferences, of which he has just given his first in two months. He has made a series of weekly radio broadcasts, which are essentially arguments against the Democrats, but he has delivered two distinguished speeches, one last November on the control of nuclear weapons and the other earlier this month on his vision of a compromise settlement in the Middle East, It is in these major pronouncements on policy that he has been the most successful.

But Mr. Reagan has not given a coherent explanation of the difference between his promises and his achievements, so that the people can judge for themselves as they approach the midtern congres-sional elections and the beginning of the last half of his elected term.

The immediate question is not merely what the Democrats think of his record, for they will emphasize his failures and minimize his successes. and they have few convincing answers of their own. The voters also have to know what the president thinks of the record, if the November vote is to be a judgment on his stewardship.

There are things to be said on his side. He has compelled a debate on the economic assumptions. of the last two generations. He has questioned the growth of government power. He has insisted on a reappraisal of the military balance of power, and he has been faithful to his beliefs — but he has left the people in serious doubt about whether his proposed remedies are succeeding.

By James Reston

At home, he is ending the fiscal year with a defi-cit of around $150 billion. He has proposed a $92-billion, or 50-percent, increase in the defense budget over the next three years, and his projected tax cuts amount to $131 billion by 1985. This would leave him not with the balanced budget he promised but with the most spectacular deficit in the history of the republic.

Absoad, the record is no more reassuring. Mr. Reagan came to office promising to unify the Atlantic Alliance, but he has divided it (over trade with the Soviet Union) more seriously than at any time since World War II. He wanted to increase the defenses of Western Europe with modern mis-siles, but the allies are reducing their defense budgets. Even the Senate Appropriations Commit-tee has voted to reduce U.S. forces in Europe. In the confusion, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany, Secretary Shultz's best friend in the alliance, is in deep trouble.

Accordingly, it is not unreasonable to ask whether the president's policies are achieving his objectives or opposing them. He wanted to keep China and the Soviet Union apart, but by his ambiguous policy about providing arms to Taiwan he may be encouraging them to get together.

Russia is in even more trouble than America, what with its difficulties in Poland and Afghanistan and its disastrous economic policy at home.
But no doubt it is delighted by Mr. Reagan's split in the alliance over the Siberian pipeline to Europe, and by his argument with Peking about arms for Taiwan. It is not Mr. Reagan who is now playing "the Chine cont". ing "the China card" against Moscow, but Moscow that is trying to play it against Washington.
"As regards Asia," Mr. Brezhnev said the other day in Baku, "we would deem it very important to achieve a normalization, a gradual improvement of relations between the U.S.S.R. and the People's Republic of China on a basis that I would describe as that of common sense, mutual respect and mu-tual advantage." Mr. Brezhnev has seldom spoken so moderately. The Chinese leaders reacted cau-tiously, but they will be receiving a Soviet delega-tion soon to discuss reconciliation. Mr. Reagan did not come into the White House anticipating that he would preside over such defi-cits at home or such alarming tangles abroad at the end of this fiscal year. He is still convinced that his supply-side economics will work at home and that he can hold the alliance together, help the Poles and the Afghans, and intimidate the Russians with his defense budgets and his pipeline sanctions—and that if his policies don't work, it is the fault of the Democrats and the allies.

of the Democrats and the aines.

He seems to be about the only person in town who thinks he can defend these policies, with 10 million unemployed, and get away with it. But while his economic and foreign policies are in deep trouble, his personal popularity remains high.

Some of his advisers have warned him not to make his record, bad as it is, a test of his economic and acti companies policies in the November elec-and anti-communist policies in the November elec-tions, but he thinks his record is pretty good, and is apprently willing to defend it anyway.

President Reagan is very good at set speeches, the best we've had in Washington since Roosevelt.

And like Al Smith, he says "Let's look at the record" - which is fair enough.

Beirut, the 'Vietnam Syndrome' and Rearming

WASHINGTON — If they said it once, back in 1980, they said it a hundred times: Ronald Reagan and the Republicans would restore American prestige abroad. They would rebuild America's dangerously inade-quate arsenai. The United States would command respect again after the humiliations of the Iranian hostage crisis, Afghanistan and the ultimate ignominy, Vietnam. So why were United States Marines the last to land in Lebanon, and why were they the first to leave, the first time around? How come the French and the Italians are in the vanguard of the multinational effort to supplant the other armed foreigners (Israelis, Syrians, PLO) by way of building stability and tranquillity into Lebanon? Why are U.S. Marines being solemnly guaranteed the sort of working conditions — "a non-hostile environment" — that you would want if you were planning to deploy, say, the Salvation Army? It's the "Vietnam syndrome," say a lot of analysts: a still powerful disinclination to use force, or get involved, or risk the awful quagmire of escalating entanglement. And that is surely part of it, judging from the bipartisan hand-wringing and sharp questioning in Congress and from the public at large. But there is something else at debilitating because it springs from nants of PLO forces have been re-ideological conviction. Once installed in office, most administrations seek some pragmatic way around campaign rhetoric that complicates the exercise of power. But the Reagan administration, shattering tradition, remains thoroughly hung-up on the ideology it proclaimed two years ago: America's prestige and influence derive almost entirely from the quantity and quality of its arms; and on both counts the country was in a poor way to stand up against threats to its security. There is a refreshing consistency in this. But there is also a foolbardy consistency when, as in the case of Lebanon, the Reagan administration, in its rush to stand tall, takes on an assignment and assumes responsibility that would seem to be all out of proportion with the means and methods it is willing to employ.

The contradictions came through work which is even more dangerously the Syrians, the Israelis and any remposition to maintain law and order. We have seen all too horribly what happened in the Palestinian camps when the U.S., French and Italian forces left prematurely, and largely on American insistence.

Mr. Weinberger says the multina-tional force is now supposed to "in-terpose itself" as a "deterrent to any adverse actions against the new Lebanese government." Now that is dangerous work. By definition, deterrence carries no guarantee that it will have the desired effect.

Yet Mr. Weinberger insisted re-peatedly that even while "the foreign policy of the president is to return peace to Lebanon as quickly as possi-ble," his every emphasis was going to be on avoiding loss of American lives. The "Vietnam syndrome," he said, was a big element in this cantion. But we are not guiding our conduct en-

U.S. foreign policy depends on the restoration of U.S. "military strength and capability." He said that the process was under way. But he also said that it would take "six or seven more years of very resolute determination and a willingness to face the fact that there is no way that it can be done without large expenditures."

And nothing, he seemed to be suggesting, would undermine that determination more than a costly or inconclusive military adventure in Leba-non — with all the impact it would have on public sensitivities.

And so, he concluded, efforts must be made in the course of the military buildup "to minimize any kind of risk or loss of life to the Americans who are asked to perform those front-line duties." Everyone should understand, he said, that this "totally worthy objective ... does not mean are going to be weak."

Maybe not. But any military presence in Lebanon is a high-risk enterprise. If public "support" and "understanding" are all that crucial — in Lebanon and in the larger strategic argument for American rearmament — it is tempting fate to promise the public that nothing unpleasant will be permitted to happen to the U.S. Marines in Lebanon. Balances India's Act By Jonathan Power

New DELHI — Indira Gandhi is back home after her Moscow visit. Considering that this was her first visit there since her return to power in 1980, she might have been expected to make more of it. After all, hadn't India refrained from voting at the United Nations to condemn the invasion of Afghanistan?

What is apparent is how much more subdued this visit was than her trip to Washington two months before. Her week in the United States was projected as a significant foreign fore. Her week in the United States was projected as a significant foreign policy development, healing old wounds, making friends and reaching out to encourage economic and technological assistance for an economy that is increasingly more open and competitive. In Moscow, Mrs. Gandhi not only kept the temperature cool but made sure with her sharpest public reference so far to the Soviet presence in Afghanistan that her hosts should not expect an over-warm embrace in the immediate future.

obsts should not expect an over-warm embrace in the immediate future.

Still, apart from a toughening of the Indian posture on the Afghanistan issue, nothing has really changed. India remains angry with Washington for planning to sell F-16s.

Delivery and Moscow's $1.63.bit. to Pakistan, and Moscow's $1.63-bil-lion arms deal on handsome terms is still going ahead. If anyone wants to make a case that Mrs. Gandhi is more pro-Soviet than pro-American, there is plenty of evidence around.

But this is to miss the point. India has had a friendly relationship with the Soviet Union since the days of the Soviet Union since the days of Mrs. Gandhi's father. For the foresceable future, the relationship will remain reasonably close. This is dictated by geographical proximity and by India's difficult relationships with Pakistan and China, but not, on the ball her idealogical efficient. Here whole, by ideological affinity. Ideologically, India is basically pro-Western. It is a parliamentary democracy and its economy is directed westward, and increasingly so.

It was Prime Minister Nehru who, along with Nasser and Tito, pioneered "nonalignment" — the art of walking a tightrope between the poles of the protagonists of the Cold War. At the outset of the Korean War India condemned North Korean aggression, but it later protested against the UN military command's decision to extend the war north of the 38th parallel. Nehru condemned the British-French Suez intervention in 1956, but muted its criticism of the Soviet move into Hungary.

Affinities

Looking back at this early period of Indian foreign policy, few histori-ans have charged that Nehru was a communist sympathizer. It is clear in retrospect, if it was not always clear at the time, that the affinity with Brit-ain and the United States was strong. Resentment of John Foster Dulles's policies for containing the Soviet Union and for extending military aid to Pakistan encouraged Nehru to keep the distance he did. But the distance was always carefully controlled, and he and Indian public opinion never allowed it to grow too far.

Mrs. Gandhi has continued in much the same vein. Even when her Congress Party was in schism at the end of the 1960s and she was pushed leftward in search of parliamentary support, she managed to maintain the balancing act. India firmly rejected Mr. Brezhnev's proposal for an Asian collective security system. And al-though India criticized U.S. bombing of North Vietnam, Mrs. Gandhi did not take public issue with overall American policy in Vietnam until very late in the day.

When she swept back to power in 1980, many observers were taken aback by her quick reversal of India's position on Afghanistan. Yet the decision was not out of character for a country whose fear of China and Pakistan is a dominant preoccupation.

Mrs. Gandhi has adroitly made sure the pendulum does not swing too far. She has gone out of her way this year to court Mr. Reagan and to be cool to Mr. Brezhnev, and she is firming up her military links with France and Britain. Her performance at the Cancún summit showed that she did not believe that India's economic al-ments would be solved by joining the Third World's socialist bandwagos and demanding the immediate introduction of a "new international order." She had already made the decision that the most powerful way w address India's needs was to open up the economy to Western competition and to deal rigorously with selfimposed bottlenecks at home. Friends and Corpses

President Reagan has expressed his horror and revulsion at the massacre of Palestinians in Beirut. This is very commendable of him and I trust that no one, whatever his views on the Middle East, will hold it against him.

But this is the same president who so strongly criticized his predecessor's human rights policy on the grounds that one ought to stick by one's "friends" in the world, whatever they may do in the way of enforcing their own views of national security. The Beirut massacre was committed in an area militarily con-trolled by a friend, Israel, and by Christian militiamen who must at least count as friends of a friend. Is there a change of policy here? Has President Reagan decided to turn against friends, or friends of friends, who persist in embarrassing American foreign policy by turning defenseless human beings into accus-ing corpses? I would like to believe The president might prove the point by returning his attention to his own hemisphere and revoking the human rights certification his State Department recently produced to aid the government of El Salvador, Or do some corpses stink more than others? How Many More?

How many more massacres must be committed against Palestinians before the world media sound the alarm? It is no exaggeration to say that more attention is paid to animal in danger of extinction than to Palestinians. Must they, too, become an endangered species before the world is joited into acknowledging that Palestinians have human rights?

An American's Grief As an American Jew who has always sustained Israel's right to exist, I want to express my grief and horror for what Israeli leaders have—on the kindest reading of it—allowed to happen in Beirut. I want to express as if Israel serves as the scapegoat for my solidarity in their grief with Pales-tinians everywhere for those helpless victims whose death diminishes me. I want to express my brotherhood with all those Israelis and Jews who oppose Israel's present leadership. Indeed, I think that if the popula-

Food for Africans

Regarding "Time Is Short for Africa on Food" (IHT, Aug. 24) and the letter from Montague Yudelman (Sept. 15): It is an anomaly of the African food situation that all the agencies assisting African governments claim that their programming is successful even as they acknowledge the failure of overall efforts.

jects in food and agriculture; and research and assistance for food cropproduction to meet domestic needs have been seriously neglected in favour of export crops. Growing hunger and food-import dependence in Africa are due to these biases, which international aid agencies have not succeeded in correcting despite good intentions and large investments.

The World Food Council report of the African food problem is drawn directly from the reports of the international agencies — including the World Bank. The World Bank's approach is well summarized by its 1981 report on sub-Saharan Africa, which concludes that "efforts should be focused more sharply on established commercial crops, where the technology is confirmed, a market already with the control of the confirmed exists and valuable spin-offs for food crops can be obtained. Projects based entirely on food crops should be small and pilot in nature." -

Mr. Clausen's commitment to increasing food production in poor countries is important. He will want to review whether "small and pilot projects" will be adequate to turn the tide of growing food deficits and hunger in poor Africa.

China Rejects Thatcher's Argument That Treaties on Hong Kong Are Valid

By Christopher S. Wren New York Times Service

BELIING - The Chinese government, in a rebuke to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain, asserted Thursday that it was not bound by the old treaties ceding parts of Hong Kong to Britain and would recover the entire colony "when conditions are ripe."

Thatcher Remarks The Foreign Ministry statement was issued to rebut remarks by Mrs. Thatcher in Hong Kong on Monday after her official visit to Chi-She said that the three treaties by which Britain had acquired the colony from China's Imperial Qing Dynasty were valid under international law and that their abrogation would be "very serious indeed."

Her remarks appeared to reflect the line she took in her talks with China's paramount leader. Deng Xiaoping, and prime minister, Zhao Ziyang, last week, but their public reiteration in Hong Kong evidently stung the Chinese.

The Chinese reply was first given orally to some foreign journalists who requested a reac-tion and was later released in a full version by the New China News Agency. It said:

"Hong Kong is part of Chinese territory. The treaties concerning the Hong Kong area signed between the British government and the government of the Qing Dynasty of China in the past are unequal treaties which have never been accepted by the Chinese people. The consistent position of the government of the People's Republic of China has been that China is not bound by these unequal treaties and that the whole Hong Kong area will be recovered

Prosperity; Stability

The Foreign Ministry, paraphrasing the joint statement read by Mrs. Thatcher at a news conference in Beijing last Friday, went on to say that "both the Chinese and British sides hope to maintain the prosperity and stability of Hong Kong and therefore will hold discus-sions through diplomatic channels."

The Foreign Ministry statement asserted the Chinese claim in more forceful terms than had claim Hong Kong whenever it chose to. The talement did not say when China thought the conditions might be "ripe."

The island of Hong Kong was ceded to Britain in perpetuity by the Treaty of Nanjing in 1842 following the first Opium War. The Beijing Convention of 1860, which followed a new round of hostilities between Britain and Juree. round of hostilities between Britain and Imperial China, gave the coastal area of Kowloon to Britain in perpetuity.

Financial Jitters

A second Beijing Convention of 1898 gave Britain the lease of the rest of Kawloon and the New Territories for 99 years. Anticipation of

The British do not dispute that their lease on 90 percent of the area will run out in 15 years and implicitly recognize that the remainder will not be a viable economic and political enti-

'Very Serious Indeed'

But Mrs. Thatcher has used the old treaties as her main bargaining point in trying to arrange a solution that will satisfy Hong Kong's more than 5 million residents, who are overwhelmingly ethnic Chinese.

Referring to the three treaties while in Hong Kong, Mrs. Thatcher said: "I believe they are valid at international law, and if countries try just to abrogate treaties like that, then it will be very serious indeed, because if a country will not stand by one treaty they will not stand by another treaty.

The Chinese government has said that the treaties are not binding because they were secured by force. It was evidently stung by Mrs. Thatcher's implication that this stand would raise doubts about its reliability on more recent treaty commitments. Britain had envisioned being allowed to keep running the colony after 1997 in return for a recognition of ultimate Chinese sovereignty. Positions on both sides appear to have hardened publicly with the recent talks.

Deng Reportedly Faced Challenge by Military Before China Congress

By Michael Parks

Los Angeles Times Service BELJING - A serious challenge to Deng Xiaoping's leadership of the Chinese Communist Party and to his pragmatic policies was Jary faction only three days before the party began its national congress this month.

Mr. Deng, now nominally the chairman of the party's central advisory commission but still the country's top leader, apparently overcame his critics, but probably at the cost of considerable com-promises on both the policies and personnel appointments approved by the congress.

He now seems intent at recovering the lost ground, defeating the generals who opposed his reforms and turning their challenge into a broad campaign against what Chi-nese leaders call the "ultraleft."

The challenge to Mr. Deng be-came known Wednesday, following the publication of a lengthy editorial by the military's Liberation Army Daily. The editorial retracted an earlier article in the paper that questioned not just some of Mr. Deng's policies but also the effectiveness, dedication and even honesty of his leadership.

Direct Policy Contradiction

The first article directly contradicted the policies adopted by the party congress, the editors of the Liberation Army Daily acknowledged, and it was written and published with this intent. That article's author, Zhao Yeya, described as a senior army' propagandist and clearly writing with the patronage of senior Chinese military commanders, went on to blame Mr. Deng and his sup-porters for a breakdown in morality, ideology and discipline that he

There had been no real improvement in China under Mr. Deng's leadership over the past four years. Mr. Zhao implied, and perhaps there had even been a decline.

The "bourgeois liberalization" that Mr. Deng himself criticized was due, first of all, to a retreat from Maoist orthodoxy, the aban-donment of "class struggle" and "continuous revolution" as key principles of Chinese politics, Mr. Zhao asserted. The new leadership had failed, he implied, to reassert a strong ideological framework for the country.

Wary Truce This criticism has long been voiced in military circles, which have grown increasingly disturbed by Mr. Deng's pragmatic socialism. But a wary truce had been in effect since late last year between Mr. Deng's forces and the army.

The "deal broke down," as a Chinese political observer remarked Wednesday, when the the armed forces was to order

The military did, in fact, force some compromises in the course of the congress, according to some Chinese sources here. One described the original article as a "sort of ultimatum" to Mr. Deng.

Program Said to Be Altered

Intensive negotiations led to the watering down of the party program, primarily on domestic economic and rural policies, and to the inclusion of additional army officers in the Central Committee and other high-level organizations, Chinese sources said.

Reagan and Statistics Are at Odds On Jobs, Auto Sales, GNP Growth

By David Hoffman Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON - President Ronald Reagan went to a familiar well in his news conference Tuesday night and in an appearance Wednesday in Virginia, blaming the Democrats for the nation's economic ills. But he also was dogged by a familiar problem: He numerous factual mistakes in his assertions about the econo-

Those errors were being underscored by Democrats on Wednesday as Mr. Reagan took to the road with his contention that "America went backward during those four Democratic years" under President Jimmy Carter.

The party's national chairman, Charles T. Manatt, said Mr. Reagan got his facts "just flat while an administration official described the president's mistakes as "de minim In stating Tuesday night that he had pulled the nation "back from the brink of disaster" and that Americans are "better off than we were" before he took office, Mr. Reagan stumbled, as he often has at news conferences, on statistics.

For example, the president as-serted that "for four quarters we have seen a growth in the gross na-tional product." In fact, the GNP, the total retail value of the nation's goods and services, adjusted for inflation, has been contracting for expanding for two. Mr. Reagan also said that although unemployment was now at post-Depression peaks, the jobless rate was rising just as fast at the end of the Carter administration. "And certainly the rate of increase in unemployment in the last six months of 1980 was just about as great as it's been at any time since," the president said.

In fact, unemployment declined in the last six months of 1980. from 7.8 percent in July to 7.3 percent in December. The increase in oblessness that year came in the brief but sharp recession of the first six months, a period in which Mr. Reagan was campaigning against Mr. Carter on that basis.

Conceding that unemployment figures in the report coming out next week might reach 10 percent, he added: "I would also like to point out that there is a higher per-centage of eligible workers in the land ... everyone over age 16, man and woman — that there is a higher percentage employed today than has been true even in the past, in times of full employment."

Mr. Reagan is correct in part: A larger percentage of the population is in the work force now because so many more women are now seeking work. But a larger percentage of the work force than ever before is not working.

Decline in John

The Bureau of Labor Statistics' employment-population ratio, which measures the percent of population over 16 years old that is employed, is now at 57.1 percent, as against a peak of 59.2 per-cent in 1979. "We know that for the last sev-

South Africans Tell of Police Torture

JOHANNESBURG - Former South African detainees alleged in a report published Thursday that the security police had systemati-cally tortured them.

They said they were mistreated in a variety of ways, including beatings and electric shocks.

The report, based on statements made by more than 70 people who had been detained by the authorities, has been submitted to the minister of police and prisons, Louis Le Grange, by a committee of the parents of detainers.

The document cited 22 allega-tions of electric shock, 54 allegations of beating, slapping and

A Russian Satellite 'Finds' Downed Plane in Canada

GREENBELT, Maryland — Three men badly injured in the crash of a light plane in the backwoods of Canada last month were rescued after a Soviet satellite passing overhead radioed their location to a ground station near Ottawa.

The rescue resulted from a four-nation system that has been seven years in the planning. The Soviet Union and United States will build the satellites for it, and France and Canada will contribute ground stations and electronic equipment. Three months ago the Russians put into orbit the first of five satellites that will eventually cover the earth, listening for the distress signals of planes and ships.

"This is the first time a satellite was the source for pinpointing the location of an air crash anywhere in the world," said Bernie Trudell, manager of satellite air rescue operations for the Goddard Space Flight Center.

The plane had crashed in a heavily wooded valley with high mountains on each side that blocked their rescue beacon from reaching passing planes. The Soviet satellite did hear the beacon, however, when it passed almost directly overhead the next day.

GREENVILLE, Texas — Monty Stratton, 70, a former pitcher with the Chicago White Sox whose at-tempted comeback in baseball aftempted comenack in basenall atter the loss of a leg was the subject of a popular motion picture, died of cancer Wednesday.

Mr. Stratton's courage inspired baseball fans across the United States more than a generation ago, and his story was told in "The Monty Stration Story," a movie starring Jimory Stewart.

In 1937 he was one of the American League's top pitchers, posting a record of 15 victories and 5 losses. He went 15-9 in 1938 and was named to the American League's All-Star team.

While hunting that November, he accidentally shot himself in the leg and severed an artery. The leg had to be removed. He returned to the Chicago White Sox as a coach the next year, but he soon went back to Texas. He kept his throwing arm in shape and after World War II signed to play for the Sher-man (Texas) Twins in the now-de-funct East Texas League. Al-though records for that team are no longer available, Mr. Stratton once said his record with Sherman in 1946 was 18-8.

Gastronomy, Under the Knife Of a Moralist

by Mary Blume

ARIS — The French have a reputation for frivolity hich, as anyone knows who lives here, is sadly unjustified. The won this reputation by thinking very seriously about what of people consider lightweight subjects: fashion and food.

Fashion has recently fallen into the hands of semiologists; anthropologist Claude Levi-Stranss wrote a book called "The Cook and the Raw." Gastronomy traditionally attracts the finest and most gorodsty trained minds. "Animals feed: man eats: only the man of interest knows how to eat," Brillat-Savarin said.

Jean-Francois Revel is a man of most distinguished intelled a leading

Jean-François Revel is a man of most distinguished intelle

Jean-François Revel is a man of most distinguished intellet a leading political philosopher, the widely translated author of "With! Marx or Jesus" and "The Totalitarian Temptation," former editor of the weekly magazine "L'Express" and now a columnist for "Le Point for many years a philosophy professor and the author of a history of the sophy. He is a bit portly, with a fine Roman head and a dab hand making a bond en daube; he is well known in Washington's corridors power and in the major kitchens of France.

Revel's interest in gastronomy, while slightly adulterat by the fact that he likes a good meal, is lofty and pure. It has notify to do with mere feeding. "Chisine is a perfecting of nutrition. Geronomy is a perfecting of cuisine itself," he writes in "Culture and Justine," just published in the United States by Doubleday, in which traces gastronomic theory and practice from the ancient Greeks to thouselle cuisine in 272 pages: He writes, he says, as a moralist rather the as a historian because "cuisine is a normative art in which, as with grafar, ethics and medicine, description and prescription can scarcely b parated." The book is dedicated to his mother.

The genial first title of the book was "Un Festin en foles," which his

The genial first title of the book was "Un Festin en ples," which his publisher claimed could not be translated into Engli but which suggests a certain lightness of touch that neither the Engli title nor translation convey. Revel says he wrote it for pleasure dig Angust vacations in the country, where he keeps his collection of okbooks. It took about 10 years. "My idea was not to write about one but about the literature because I think, without going to Barthan or Foucaultian extremities, the words are very important."

"Every menn," he writes, "is an exercise in rivic." A few pages later: "The cher's art is precisely the art of knowing hat he can borrow from various traditions without betraying them." Is as handy with an aphorism as his admired Brillat-Savarin though his te hero seems to be the brilliant 19th-century chef Carème, a self-mad tellectual who once stated, "The fine arts are five in number, name painting, sculpture, poetry, music and architecture, the principal brill of the latter being pastry."

The book is informative and, since it is by vel, one of the few Frenchmen to speak disrespectfully of Descart is provocative. He takes up the defense of Trimalchio, the Roma ch-boor, by praising him for the enormous trouble he went through entertain his guests, and he refuses to accept the tradition whereby such culinary art was revolutionized by Catherine de Medicis in 1533 ty's sole contribution, he states, was the refinement of manners and the vention of pastry and support trades.

He can be most categorical: "The Middle s," he states, "was the era of seasoned stews, the Renaissance the as tasty sweetmeats." A book by two 18th-century Jesuits is "as in tant in the history of cuisine as Parmenides's poem was in the key of philosophy." He divides cuisine into two sorts: the traditional ich is based on age old skills, and the crudite, based on invention, real and experimentation. He thinks it's disgusting to put lobster in bouillabaisse or to grill loop, or sea-bass, in thyme, "an herb never mt to be caten—does one eat the tea leaves that remain in the bottor the teapot?" Of all the disciplines, cuisine, he says, has the great and most naive belief in progress and decadence.

There is a lot of nonsense talked about c.e., Revel said in his sunny flat on the lie St. Louis, which seems carp, wallpapered and upholical control of the lie St. Louis, which seems carp, wallpapered and upholical control of the lie St. Louis, which seems carp, wallpapered and upholical control of the lie St. Louis, which seems carp, wallpapered and upholical control of the lie St. Louis, which seems carp, wallpapered and upholical control of the lie St. Louis, which seems carp, wallpapered and upholical control of the lie St. Louis, which seems carp, wallpapered and upholical control of the lie St. Louis, which seems carp, wallpapered and upholical control of the lie St. Louis, which seems carp, wallpapered and upholical control of the lie St. Louis, which seems carp, wallpapered and upholical control of the lie St. Louis, which seems carp, wallpapered and upholical control of the lie St. Louis, which seems carp, wallpapered and upholical control of the lie St. Louis, which seems carp, wallpapered and upholical control of the lie St. Louis, which seems carp, wallpapered and upholical control of the lie St. Louis, which seems carp, wallpapered and upholical control of the lie St. Louis, which seems carp, wallpapered and upholical control of the lie St. Louis, which seems carp, wallpapered and upholical control of the lie St. Louis, which seems carp, wallpapered and upholical control of the lie St. Louis, which seems carp, wallpapered and upholical control of the lie St. Louis control of the lie St. Lou stered in books. "Quite often people say acuisine is only possible in an affluent society. The implication is that reactionary to like good cuisine. But that is simply not true. poorer than Germany." New York's sudden passion for cuising vel says, simply reflects its position in the world. "It is something thows the wealth of the city. It was Alexandria in the first century H Rome a little later. It was as difficult to find someone in Rome of the century who spoke Latin as it is hard to find someone who speaks lish in Miami. They are cosmopolitan cities full of migrant worker.

Of Revel's various occupations, it being a magazine editor that made him think most about food. "Thiness lunch. In America they are very light except for the famous theartmis, but it's very different in France. Even if you're having lunch a foreigner, because he's in Paris he expects to be taken to Tailley."

There's also a cultural phenome ant to say to someone, he is outraged if you tell him to come to your office at 9:30. Lunch is the green light that tells him he's important."

There is a good deal of gamesmanship at the luncheon table, Revel says. "The people who at a restaurant that specializes in food from southwestern France ask for gilled fish and who ask for filet mignon in a fish restaurant — simply to destabilize the host." He has nothing against fast food and is religious that his some would rether as at McDoreld's fish restaurant — simply to destabilize the host." He has nothing against fast food and is relieved that his sons would rather eat at McDonald's than at the Tour d'Argent. "It costs less," he says.

In 1971 the translation of Revel's "Without Marx or Jesus" made him a hero in America because it stated that a bloodless revolution was in the process of occurring there. Revel still believes in the revolution but it was in fact Europeans that he was writing for.

"The first thing I wanted to explain to Europeans in 1970 is that contrary to the conventional wisdom in Europe, America was not basically reactionary. Why be patronizing and say America is in danger of becoming fascist when we had invented Nazism, Stalinism, Petainism,

"The second point is that revolution takes place at the grass roots and American society has been changing all the time. In the 1960s the richest society in the world went through a profound change. True revolution is not a copy of a former revolution; it is something no one has ever seen. "It has nothing to do with political regime. True revolution does not occur at the political level. America changed under Nixon. French society changed more under Napoleon III, which was a totalitiarian regime, than under the Third Republic.

There were real changes which have been absorbed now, I think the only revolutions that succeed are the ones that are accepted in the long Revel's next book was "The Totalitarian Temptation" in which he asks if in the soul or mind of man there is a wish to be governed in a totalitarian way. He is now writing a follow-up that studies the decline of democracy.

"In the struggle of power in the world now, the paradox is that the Soviet Union has a winning position on the chessboard at a moment when Communism is completely discredited as a political system."

With the unveiling of Maoist brutalities, the Cambodian bloodbath and the failure of Caba, Communism all over the world has been proved an ideological and economic failure, Revel says, and yet the West gets weaker. They can take advantage of our weaknesses, we can't take advantage of theirs. Poland resulted not in sanctions against Russia but in the allies' falling out over the pipeline. "A not very clever philosopher named Adolf Hitler showed that very clearly in Mem Kamp? — democracy is not a system that withstands attack, it is an inward-looking system. I think democracy means we are born losers."

The book will be 400 pages long and Revel so far has only an English title: "How and Why Democracy Will Die."
"It is a very sad book," he said. It sounds it, but after a very fine luncheon designed by Mr. Revel at a nearby restaurant, things didn't

Raw it simply has an unpleasant, vaguely green fla-vor, and when baked in pies or whipped into ice cream desserts it is much like sour, overly

Pink peppercorns, another conceit of nouvelle cuisine advocates, only occasionally add interest to food. Aside from its suspected adverse effects on health — none of which I have experienced although I have eaten a lot of pink peppercorns — this hard, shelly berry adds an unpleasant grittiness to the foods it seasons. I have had it used effectively only by Penddy Circulat in his partnerse in Criscian rreddy Girardet in his restaurant in Crissier, Switzerland, when it was finely powdered and mixed with green and black peppercoms to adom steamed fillets of rouget. That way it added just a bint of exercise way. Freddy Girardet in his restaurant in Crissic added just a hint of exotic pungency that was bolstered by the other peppers.

10. American champignons, otherwise known as plain old mushrooms, are mere symbols of mushrooms — bland, white, flavorless and so full of water that they must be sweated before they can be browned. When they are used in sauces and some it's a good idea to add some powdered dried mushrooms to make up for the lack of flavor.

11. Perrier is easily surpassed by the Italian San Pellegrino water for flavor and delicacy and just as easily matched by seltzer. Watch out in the United States for the ultrasnob cachet about to be attached to Khisu, the newly imported bottled water from South Korea at approximately the same price as Perrier. Little distinguishes it but the green glass bottle with Korean calligraphy that makes a pretty bud

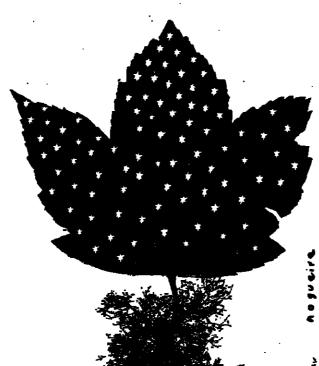

12. Olympia oysters, supposedly one of the glories of Pacific waters, have always seemed bland disappointments to me when I have had them in the so-called best places of Los Ange-les and San Francisco. Perhaps these tiny slips of oysters have more flavor in their native Oregon and Washington, but those I've eaten had virtually no flavor compared with the more sa-line bluepoints, Wellfleets and Cape Cods and the gently briny Bélons of France and brassy Limfords of Denmark.

I could make this a baker's dozen of overrated foods if I followed my inclination and added any crabment other than backfin hump crabment from Chesapeake Bay. Shanghai crab, tasted in Hong Kong, was a close second, but that much cannot be said for the blacktipped Cuban Moro crab, New Orleans crabment or any Dungeness I have eaten in California. But I reserve final judgment on the Dungeness, feeling that perhaps like Olympia oysters, the best examples can be found only in

Washington and Oregon. 01982 The New York Times

TRAVEL

To October, With Love

by John Russell

TEW YORK - October is my favorite vacation time. Some people think that Dr. John Donne, the Dean of St. Paul's, had no warrant for what he told his parishioners in 1640 — that "In heaven, it is always autumn." But what he said is just fine with me. The very sound of the word October puts me in a good humor. I love the sharp click of the "Oc," as if somewhere in our heads a pistol were being cocked. Next comes the broad central arch of the "o," and there's no telling where that arch may take us. Then the brisk little "b" pushes us out of the languor of summer and tells us to shape up for a long, hard and vastly enjoyable winter.

There is something definitive about October. It is the time when the last grain of vacation sand has been knocked out of the last sneaker. Every last boat has been dragged inland. Socks and ties are back again as facts of everyday life. Cardboard summerhouses are closed for the winter. Heat, water and light are cut off. The telephone talks to itself, or not at all. Masquerades are over, and identities redefined. October in Europe is what I know best. It's fundamentally a Big City month, much as we may enjoy the first nip of the fall frost, the erratic bang-bang of the French "sportsman" as he blazes away at every least squirrel and in England, what Alfred Lord Tennyson called "the mock sunshine of the faded woods."

It is a wonderful moment in Paris or Brussels or Amsterdam when the last brown leaf falls from the trees and we once again see bare perspectives and vistas unsoftened. Not only do we see more in October, but we hear more — the iron footstep of a horse four blocks away, the cry of the last surviving knife grinder (he, too, is back from vacation) or the bugle call from the barracks on the other side of the river.

October has, moreover, a range of atmospheric effects that not even summer can quite equal. At what other time do we see metropolitan mists that run the gamut from silver to deep purple? Or skies of quite so fierce and so freshly laundered a blue? Or clouds that are quite so white and so brisk? Or the tongues of fire that mark the burning of the leaves in London's parks? Or the celestial effect of autumn sunlight on the waterfront of Leningrad? Wonderful too, are the blue smoke from the roast chestnut stands, the glow from the stoves on the newly glassed-in cafe terraces, the heaped oysters outside the fish restaurants, the unidentified and very small birds oysiers outside the use restaurants, the influentined and very anality brids that turn up on menus all over Europe. (It doesn't do to be too squeamish about those birds, by the way.) Fall food is more various than summer food, and in one country after another the heavyweight game dishes challenge the heavyweight red wines as to which can make it more difficult for us to get up from the table. In Turin, the white truffle works its brief irreplaceable magic, and all over England there are a thump and a thud as pheasant and partridge fall dead from the air, to reappear in due time on the menu. If you like the theater, there are no two ways about it: Performances in October are crisper, sharper and in general more together than they are in high summer. It is a joy to walk around a big city in Europe and quiz the playbills, the concert programs and the operas in repertory. There is a special air of concentration about all these activities in October. Even where what is scheduled is something that may turn up year 'round, there is something irresistibly congenial about the gladness with which the locals approach the first "Don Giovanni," the first "Twelfth Night" or the first Archduke Trio.

Attention is fresh in all these areas. Productions are often new, and people are ready to take a flyer on them. No one has begun to think about Christmas. It's a time to make reputations (or lose them) and something of that communicates itself to the audience. The audience is likely, moreover, to be more cohesive than it is in the summer, with fewer foreigners, fewer people from out of town and none of the manity that sometimes characterizes the great summer festivals.

Museums likewise are at their best in October. The crowds are smaller, the hours of daylight are not yet too short and if you have a favor to ask of the curators they are likely to be back at their posts. In the dealer's galleries you can almost hear the rise of the curtain in October, such is the pressure to get in early with something good. It's contagious, moreover. Even your friends will be more glad to see you in October, in hopes that you can slake their craving for novelty and wonted amuse

As hardly needs saying, October is not a major month for townsm. It may therefore be easier for you to fly when you feel like it, take the best train of the day on impulse and walk straight into the hotel you want most. (Watch, though for certain scourges of October — the motor shows, the book fairs, the boat shows and all the other unexpected crowd-pullers that can force you into the suburbs.)

Once in your hotel, you are likely to find that the concierge, the maitre d'hotel and all the other people who can make you life comfortable are not as harassed as they are in high summer. That dreaded form of words "What group are you with?" may not even enter their heads. You will be accepted as a member of that endangered species, the independent traveler, and they will knock themselves out in deference to your smallest

They will also be delighted to see that you are not traveling with young children. For better or for worse, your children are likely to be in school in October, and so will other people's. The October traveler inhabits a grown-up world, and need have none but grown-up concerns in mind. Many a marriage has been, if not saved, at any rate renewed and refreshed on that account.

October is good for ships, too, even if the schedules may be cut by three-quarters. As most business people have long abandoned the ship as a way of travel in or around Europe, and as almost every ship of any size is now orientated toward cruising, you may find it difficult to recapture the leisurely comfort and the superfine service with which the Channel packet was once associated as it crossed from Dover to Calais and back again. Bingo and the TV dinner are more likely to be your lot if you persist. But it's worthwhile to ask around. If you have plenty of time and something to read, the Rhine steamer has much to recommend it as it works its way toward the sea from Basel, and so has the Danube steamer

In this and other contexts traveling in October calls for research and resource. Neither the readymade nor the secondhand will do. Homework is fundamental. But in return for all this the traveler gets to penetrate his chosen city as a free and informed human being. I recommend it.

Frankfurt: More Than a Book Fair

by Anna Tomforde

RANKFURT — Most people know Frankfurt as West Germany's com-mercial capital, especially in October, when the annual International Book Fair brings some 5,500 publishers to display their wares, but it has much more to offer than the annual round of major trade fairs and the Country's main stock exchange.

Frankfurt is situated roughly in the heart of West Germany, enabling the visitor to explore its picturesque surroundings. Rhine cruises, a river-boat shuttle on the Main, or a tour of the Special translation and the Moselle valley are Spessart mountains and the Moselle valley are among the easily accessible attractions that can be arranged. The tourist office (Frankfurter Verkehrsverein), tel: 0611-252.737, will tell a visitor how to reach the appropriate agents.
The city itself has 200,000 inhabitants, and with a quarter of them foreigners, Frankfurt has a cosmopolitan flair. It is not unusual to come across shops run by Italians, Turks, Yu-goslavs, Spaniards or Greeks who came to West Germany for work during the prosperous years of the 1950s and 1960s when thousands of workers were imported.

A walk or bus tour through the city center or the suburb of Höchst will remind you that Frankfurt, despite the towering modern buildings and a tangled road network, has kept the charm of its past: The Römer, an elaborate 16th-century building with exquisite woodcarving decorations, is now the city hall. It looks on to the Römerplatz, the site for the annual Christmas market and other festivals. Other buildings in the historic city center are the Hauptwache, an 18th-century sentry house that has been reconstructed in its original Gothic style, the Paulskirche and the cathedral where German emperors were once crowned On touring these sights, the foreign visitor might feel it is a shame that Frankfurt failed to come the capital of West Germany by one vote in the parliamentary council of 1948.

Right now Frankfurt is preparing for its major annual event, the International Book Fair, probably the world's most important meeting place for the sale and acquisition of book rights and translations. Among the 300,000 titles on display when the fair opens next Wednesday, the visitor will find 86,000 new fiction and nonfiction publications. The event is primarily a trade fair: Books are not made available to the general public, and ordering is restricted to publishers, booksellers, librarians, wholesalers and literary agents.

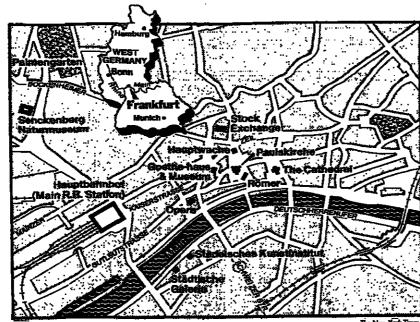

About 80 per cent of the exhibitors at the fair come from abroad, and most of the foreign exhibits are to be found in Hall 5 at the fairground. From Oct. 6 to 10, the fair is open to those in the trade from 9 A.M. to 2 P.M., and to the general public from 2 P.M. to 6:30 P.M. The entrance fee is 3.50 Deutsche marks ($1.40). Children below the age of 6 can enter free of charge and those below 14 have to be accompanied by an adult.

A central organization office will operate in the western wing of Hall 5, and all telephone inquiries to the fair must be made to 0611-

Frankfurt's international airport is a 30 DM taxi ride from the fairground and from the city's main hotels, but there is also regular bus service from the airport, and from leading hotels to the fair, as well as a direct underground line from the airport to the main railway station in the city center. From there, tramlines 16 and 18 go to the fair.

Frankfurt is not only books to the foreign visitor this fall, although its literary pedigree is underscored by the fact that Goethe was born in the city in 1749, spent most of his youth here and wrote "Werther" here.

The Goethe-haus and an adjacent museum in the Grosser Hirschgraben are open to the public on weekdays from 9 A.M. to 6 P.M., but until 4 P.M. from October to March. ning hours on Sundays are from 10 A.M. to 1 P.M. The Gothic building was damaged by Allied bombing in 1944, but most of its contents had already been transferred to safer laces, so that much of the original furniture, books, pictures and manuscripts can be seen. The Städel museum, open from 10 to 5 except on Mondays, is famous for its collection of Dutch primitives and 16th-century German masters, including works by Dürer, Lucas Cranach the Elder, Hans Holbein the Elder, Rubens and Rembrandt.

The Senckenberg museum, open 9 to 4 except Mondays, is the largest natural history museum in West Germany, and the Palmengarten, a park in the city center, contains palm trees, other tropical plants and Alpine gardens. Frankfurt's zoo is famous for its collection and includes an exotarium where animals live in natural surroundings. (Open 8 A.M. to 7 P.M., but until 5 P.M., in winter.)

Frankfurt's opera has gained a reputation for being daring and exciting under the direc-tion of Michael Gielen. For tickets, telephone 2562-335 or 2562-529. This Saturday the opera is staging Verdi's "Masked Ball" with Mara Zampieri, Luis Lima, Georgeo Zancanaro and Claire Paull, with Judith Somogi conducting. And on Oct. 14, the Kammerspiel theater will show three one-act operettas by Jacques Of-

Frankfurt's old opera, which was destroyed during the war, has been restored and was reopened last year, with the old façade and a modern interior, and it is now Frankfurt's main concert hall.

The city's two main theaters, the Schauspiel and the Kammerspiel, are housed in the same complex as the opera. While the Schauspiel (2562-435) concentrates on classics, the Kammerspiel (2562-435) is experimental and provocative, and shows mostly plays by contem-porary writers from East and West Germany. This fall's program includes "Bambule," writ-ten by Ulrike Meinhof, the journalist who be-came a leader of the Baader-Meinhof terrorist group and who died in prison in 1975.

The Theater Am Turm has maintained its reputation of the 1960s and '70s of being Frankfurt's most progressive and experimental stage. It has modified its left-wing image and is now the only stage in Western Europe that lends its facilities to free theater groups from West Germany and abroad. The TAT has no ensemble of its own, and the experiment is fully subsidized by the city.

Next Wednesday, the TAT has a premiere dedicated to Richard Wagner, "Erlösung dem Erlöser" ("The Redemption of the Redeemer"). The play and the music — presented in German — were written by Robert Moran of New York and the direction is by David Ostwald. The play, according to a the-ater spokesman, is aimed at "dismantling the myth" surrounding the composer. The box off-ice phone number is 1545-110. As for accommodations, Frankfurt's leading hotels include the Park-hotel (double room around 200 DM), the old-fashioned and exqui site Frankfurter Hof (double around 200 DM) and the Hessischer Hor (double 250 DM).

The Park-hotel, apart from good food, has a Casablanca Bar modeled on the film. For hotel reservations, contact the Frankfurter tourist office, which also organizes sightseeing tours. Frankfurt can accommodate 18,000 visitors in hotels, boarding houses and private rooms, but is often tight for space during peak fair times. The city of Offenbach, center of the leather industry, is about nine miles away and offers places to stay as well as some sightseeing at-tractions. Hotels in Offenbach include the Kaiserhof (double room 175 DM), the Euler (dou-ble 150 DM), and the Graf (double 125 DM). Additional accommodations can be found in Wiesbaden, the capital of the state of Hesse, which is 24 miles from Frankfurt.

Back in Frankfurt, the Frankfurter Hof (Steigenberger) at the central Kaiserplatz offers two of the best restaurants in town: the Restaurant Français, where visitors can expect to pay 250 DM for a dinner for two plus wine, and the Frankfurter Stubb, a cozy restaurant.

For the visitor who wants to see where bankers and businessmen enjoy good solid food and select wines, go to the Börsenkeller in the basement of the stock market. And Heyland's Weinstuben is a small and comfortable familyrun restaurant that specializes in venison and seafood, to be washed down with vintage wines. A lunch or dinner for two will cost about 100 DM, depending on the wine. For simple and good German food at moderate prices, try the Dippegucker.

Apart from hotel restaurants, Erno's Bistro.

a French restaurant in Liebigstrasse, specializes in foie gras and lamb. Tables have to be reserved (tel. 721-997) and a bill of about 150 DM for two is usual.

Le Caveau is another excellent French restaurant hidden in a courtyard behind modern facades, only to surprise the visitor by its beautiful location in a 200-year-old wine cellar, Dinner for two can cost as much as 200 DM.

If you want to get away from the fashion-able side of Frankfurt, take a trip to Sachsenhausen, a suburb on the left bank of the river Main that can be traced back to the 12th century. There you will find pubs and restaurants in tree-lined courtyards where the local drink, Applewoi (a rather dry cider), and local food are served inside and, in the summer, in the open air. Sachsenhausen also has the city's largest flea market, open Saturday mornings.

ELOUET, Morocco — A crumbling castle looms over the squalid village of Telouet, lodged deep in Morocco's High Atlas Mountains south of Marrakesh. To the north, painted peaks thrust up over 10,000 feet and the icy Oued Mellah, river of salt, slinks along to its basin.

As the visitor approaches the reddish stone-and-clay citadel, dogs, goats and ragamuffin Berber children will descend on his car. A dark, somber girl emerges from a nearby shanty and disperses the mob with a flurry of threatening curses. She carries a thick brass ring, heavy with giant keys, and a stick to keep her brothers at bay.

After inserting a 10-inch key in the ancient lock, she presses her weight against a huge studded door, which yawns open at last, allowing just enough space to pass. Inside is a disheveled courtyard, which leads to a labyrinth of halls, rooms and dozens of locked doors. Everywhere towers and walls are crumbling, doors falling off their rusted hinges.

Through a maze of musty corridors, the last great door is flung open and the visitor enters the harem, richly decorated with painted tiles, elaborately molded plaster and delicate wooden ceilings, carved and hanging. Rooms lead off in all directions, each with a new revelation.

This gloomy, ramshackle fortress and palace was the home of the Giaoui, the "Eagle of Telonet," who just three decades ago ruled Marrakesh and the south of Morocco. When he died, broken and hamiliated, rakesh and the south of Morocco. When he died, broken and humiliated, in 1956, work was still in progress on Telouet's castle, once intended to house the world's most fabulous palace. Hundreds of craftsmen had worked for years on the grand reception rooms alone.

The precious furniture and most of the ornate marbles, tiles and inlays have been carted off to adorn other palaces. What is left of the decor is chipped and cracked and carpeted with line red dust. Rooms where heads of state once paid homage to the Glaoni are now empty. Only the dark girl and her family linger to show the relies of an extinct dynasty. In his book "Lords of the Atlas," Gavin Maxwell recounted the bloody history of the House of Giaoui: "The whole life in those great Atlas fortified kasbahs was one of warfare and gloom. Every tribe had its enemies, every family had its blood feuds, and every man his would-be murderer." Till the end of the 19th century, the Berber tribe of Glaoua, from its seat at Telouet, controlled a key mountain pass leading from the pre-Sahara around Ouarzazate to Marrakesh and north Morocco; the nearby Tizi n'Tichka pass was not finished till the 1930s. In 1866 Madani El Glaoni was born to the Caid of Telouet and his Ethiopian concubine Sora, and 13 years later Thami followed. These brothers would rise to depose two suitans and, with the help of their French overlords, became the most feared men in Morocco for more than four decades. "The words of the Glaoui break stones," it was said. The dark and willowy Madani, ruler of Morocco in all but name, lived in splendor at Marrakesh and Telouet until his death in 1918. Thami proved even more ruthless than his brother, stripping Madani's sons of their power and wealth and swelling his own harem of 96 wives with 54 of his brother's widows. Voices raised in protest found themselves echoing against the cold stones of Telouet's dungeon.

As an instrument of French colonialism for 37 years, Thami El Glaoui amassed wealth and military power. His despotic rule, based in Marrakesh, was cemented by modern French arms and a vast spy and color account and a programment.

police network that used murder, torture and imprisonment.

French propaganda made the Glaoui almost a cult figure in Europe in the 1920s and 1930s. He was the "Lion of the Atlas," the "Eagle of Telouet," the "Black Panther," seen as an invincible warrior (he received France's highest military honors) and a sexual superman. Maxwell describes him as "sober and dignified, with skin the color of dark terracotta and black eyes burning like coals," Thami nourished the myths with banquets and gifts, with his exquisite manners and diplomacy.

French intellectuals were taken with his image, at once cultivated and barbaric. A superb golfer, Thami hacked Morocco's first course out of the arid plains near Marrakesh. His friend Winston Churchill invited him to the coronation of Elizabeth II.

In 1927, Mohammed V, father of Morocco's present king, Hassan II, succeeded to the throne with the approval of the French and the Glaoni, who believed they could easily control the young man. When it became clear that Mohammed's sympathies lay with the Moroccan independence movement—the Istiqlal—the Glaoni concocted a bluff to oust him. Using the pretext of impending tribal festivities. Thami convinced thousands of Berber warriors to march on Fey and Rabat and with Fearth. sands of Berber warriors to march on Fez and Rabat and, with French assistance, forced Mohammed into exile, and installed one of his own elderly uncles in power in Rabat. From Finland, a Rare Musical Export

by Axel Krause

EMOURS, France - Finland's creativity in music never has projected as far as its accomplishments in design, but there are some notable exceptions: the composer Jean Sibelius and a handful of instrumentalists, first among them Arto Noras, a quiet-spoken, hard-driving

Noras has played a very important role in helping project a favorable image of our country," says a Foreign Office official in Helsinki,

"particularly with people who might have trouble finding Finland on a map."

"For mastery of the instrument and sheer musicality, he is perfect," says Paul Boufil, a French cellist who served last month as artistic director of an international cello festival in this medieval town 80 kilometers south of Paris. As part of Nemours's 13-day program, the 40-year-old Noras conducted master classes for 10 young French cellists, displaying and ex-plaining his vigorous, agile style and approach

With his tremendous concentration, he can play anything — brilliantly — which is why I came," explains Eric Rambour, 24, who has been studying the cello for 10 years.

Just before a concert in Nemours's church of Saint Jean-Baptiste in which Noras played works of K.P.E. Bach, Kodaly and Tchaikovsky, Jean-Pierre Wallez, who heads the Ensem-ble Orchestral de Paris, was discussing Finnish music and performers. "The Finns, often with unpronounceable names, tend to be timid and closed — and they are removed geographically. They have to be discovered, like their music," said Wallez, who has regularly invited Noras to the festival he organizes in Albi, in southwestern France. "You have to seek them out, as I have."

This summer at Albi, Wallez also invited Eero Heinonen, a lesser-known Finnish pianist, who attracted favorable reviews for his playing of Sibelius and particularly for a Schumann duo performed with Noras. "I am not saying that there are masses of brilliant, undiscovered musicians in Finland," Wallez continued, "but there is considerable talent up there no one in the West has ever heard about such as instrumentalists of all kinds and good orchestra directors, many in their 30s or 40s."

When cellists in general are discussed, it is impossible not to debate the undisputed talents of Mstislav Rostropovich. Professional musicians, students, music critics and plain fans of the cello attending the Nemours festival generally agreed that the Russian is a suberb cellist. But they also grumbled that his exuberance and showmanship allow him to overshadow other major cellists

"It is very difficult to class the top of our league," says Boufil, the solo cellist in Wallez's ensemble. "At the very top, there is really little difference in how well they play," he continues, listing — in addition to Noras — Lynn Harrell, Heinrich Schiff, Natalia Gutman and cellists André Navarra (who also taught a mas-ter class and peformed at Nemours) and Paul

Fortelier, who was Noras's teacher in the early

Most of the world's leading cellists know each other and some are friends. When Rostropovich visits Finland, for example, he invariably stays at Noras's spacious house just outside Helsinki, a relationship that goes back to 1966, when the Russian was president of the Tabaikanshy Competition jury in Moscow. to 1966, when the Russian was president of the Tchaikovsky Competition jury in Moscow. Noras, who won second prize, was "the most harmonious of the foreign musicians," Rostropovich concluded, predicting he had "a very promising and excellent future."

Just as Rostropovich projects a decidedly warm, gregarious Russian image, Noras is every bit a Finn. Calm and reserved, he insists — when pressed — that Finnish creativity in music dominates the country's Nordic neighbors.

sic dominates the country's Nordic neighbors. In his schedule of roughly 90 concerts a year, Noras plays Finnish works whenever he can, while insisting that he is not an ambassador of his country's music. "I am not a particular connoisseur of Finnish music, for which there just is not that much demand," he says, noting that at a 13-day festival he runs in the scenic port town of Naantali in southwestern Finland, only an afternoon and an evening were devoted to his country's music.

"But then acceptance of modern music is always difficult, whatever its nationality," he

"We are a small country and much of our work is not known outside — with possibly a few exceptions," he continues, citing the works of such contemporary Finnish composers as Emojuhani Rautavaara, Joonas Kokkonen and Aulis Sallinen. Operas by Kokkonen and Sallinen, performed by the Finnish National Opera at the Metropolitan Opera, will be presented for the first time in New York next spring.

But in his extensive repertoire, Noras lists only one cello concerto by each of the composers, who also are his friends, plus a sonata by Kokkonen. These works are in relatively strong demand throughout the Nordic countries, Britain and, to a lesser degree, West Germany. As for Finland's most famous composer, Noras notes that "Sibelius never wrote for Noras is back now in Helsinki, teaching at the Sibelius Academy, which be entered at the age of 7 and which is a key training ground for the nation's musicians. "If we leave out Sibelius, Noras is our best-known graduate," says Ellen Marjatta Urho, the rector. The academy has 1,000 students and draws on 300 teachers, including Noras. "He has helped put us on the

That view is echoed by Jean Grattier, the there is a chance he will come back," Grattier says. How would a Finnish piece go over? "If played by Arto," says Boufil, "no problem."

The Hottest Thing on Wheels

by Samuel Abt

ARIS — After a month spent worrying about breakaways, punctures and time trials. Greg Lemond was brooding about jet lag, not usually a concern of professional bicycle racers accustomed to cru-sing speeds of 25 miles an hour.

Lemond had just finished a busy and successful September, and now he was going perstar of French bicycle racing, that meant La Crosse, Wisconsin, Reno, Nevada, and Sac-ramento, California. To offset the nine-hour flight from Paris to Chicago, Lemond decided to stay up until the early morning, then sleep through noon before boarding his afternoon

"It's worth a try," he explained in the lobby of his airport hotel, well past midnight. "And even if it doesn't work, I'll probably bounce back pretty quickly. I'm young and strong."

Nobody can quarrel with the rider, and not only because he is 21 years old and looks remarkably fit at 5 feet 10 inches and 145 pounds. On Sept. 5 he finished second in the world championship road race for professionals in Goodwood, England. Two weeks later, on Sept. 20, he won the 10-day Tour de L'Avenir by 10 minutes 18 seconds, the largest margin in the history of the race for young professionals and the best of the world's amateurs.

"His victory doesn't surprise me," said Bernard Hinault, Lemond's leader on the Re-nault-Gitane team and four times the winner of the Tour de France, the world's most presti-gious bicycle road race. "He's a super racer," continued Hinault, who did not ride in the Tour de L'Avenir. "I've always said it and I consider him my potential successor."

Only Lemond himself seems unawed by his victory. "I'm not in as good shape now as I was in the spring," he says. "If I hadn't crashed then, I really think I would have finished the season in the top five in the Super Pernod," an overall points competition among international riders. Lemond missed two months of the season after his crash in the first kilometer of the Liège-Bastogne-Liège classic on April 11. A photographer on a motorcycle pulled along-side him and asked Lemond to look his way. Obligingly, Lemond did, squeezing his hand-brakes. "It was real cold," he remembers, "and my brakes had iced up. I hit another rider, Didi Thurau, we both went down and I broke my right collarbone."

He jokes about the accident now — "At least when I fell, I took out a rival" - but admits that the time lost ruined his hopes for most of the season. He returned to action June 2 in the Tour de Luxembourg, finishing 13th and helping Hinault to victory.

Still considered too young for the Tour de France before 1984, Lemond took July off when all other competition ceased. He spent early August participating in eight criteriums, daily races in Europe's small towns, and then began training for the world championships.

"I trained really hard two weeks before the worlds," he says. "But the week before, I got sick, really sick, from bad water, I think. So five or six days before the race I decided to skip it and go to the Alps to train for the Tour de L'Avenir.

"But my wife's parents were coming to Eng land all the way from Wisconsin and they had nonrefundable tickets, and my folks were com-ing too, so I was kind of obligated to go." He turns to his wife, the former Kathy Morris, and smiles. Courteous and low-keyed off his bicycle, he — like Hinault, his good friend has a reputation for meanness on it. ("When I race," Lemond admits, "my mind completely changes. I get much more aggressive.")

He shocked speciators at the world championships by leading the pack's final sprint against the leader, Jack Boyer, another American. It is probably not unprecedented to try to prevent a teammate from winning, but nobody recalls having seen it before.

Lemond remains unapologetic, "We were in the last 500 meters and Boyer only had about a 20-meter lead, which there was no way he could keep. I didn't think he could win it and I didn't want him to. He's just not a friend. He's never won a professional race and I didn't think he was the kind of guy who should be world champion. Boyer knew from the start of the race that we weren't friends and that we were both out for ourselves.

"I was wearing the U.S. jersey, sure, but there really wasn't a U.S. team and I definitely wasn't part of it. I paid for my own trip to England, my hotel bills, everything. There was no support from the U.S. federation. The team I was racing for was Renault."

Hinault, however, had dropped out long before the final sprint and, as Lemond led the chase after Boyer, Guiseppe Saronni of Italy shot by and won the title by five seconds. Lemond took the silver medal by two seconds over Sean Kelly of Ireland as Boyer faded to finish 10th. "I didn't realize Saronni was on my wheel," explains Lemond, still upset that he didn't win. His medal was the first for an American in a world professional bicycling

Lemond also won the first medal by an American in a world amateur bicycling championship, in 1979 in Argentina, where he captured the juniors title. "We were all so excited on the flight home, wondering how many peo-ple would meet the plane. The team had done so well. We were thinking reporters, fans, maybe even a band. There was nobody, not even a federation representative.

"Bicycle racing isn't much of a sport yet back home. I want to help build the sport in the U.S. Maybe it'll take somebody winning the Tour de France to do it."

The "somebody" Lemond is thinking about took up the sport in 1975. He was born June 26, 1961, in Los Angeles, and says his father, a real estate salesman, "just wanted to get us out of the smog there." He moved the family to Lake Tahoe, Nevada, in 1968 and to "between Reno and Carson City" three years later.

Downhill skiing was Lemond's first sport but then he began freestyle skiing. "Wayne Wong, a freestyle skier I admired, rode a bike for training and I began doing it too when I was 14, in the fall. That winter there was a drought, absolutely no snow, in Nevada or California, so I rode the bike all December and January instead of skiing.
"I finished second in a club race and then won the first official race I entered, for cadets between 12 and 15, and I got hooked. I read every magazine about bicycle racing I could and six months later decided I wanted to turn pro someday." He laughs about his enthusi-

As a member of the U.S. Olympic team, he came to France in 1979 for training, won a professional-amateur race, the Circuit de la Sarthe, and finished third in the Circuit des Ardennes, winning a stage. "I attracted some attention and Cyrille Guimard, the manager of the Renault team, came and watched me one

It was nearly the wrong day. "I was chasing three Russians on a breakaway and I was 10 seconds from them and moving up fast when I punctured. It took the team car five minutes to get to me and the race was lost and I was so mad you wouldn't believe it."

"He threw his bike at the team car," his wife

"They cost me the race," Lemond says in rebuttal. Team cars are usually only 30 seconds away. "And then the mechanic told me I had to continue, for the good name of the "Then he threw his bike into the grass at the side of the road," his wife continues. "So somebody said to Guimard. Do you want a racer like that? and Guimard told him, 'Now I want him. He's got character.'

Lemond sits back on the couch in the hotel lobby, looking pleased with the support from Guimard, a team manager he says he likes and respects. He is not a bit abashed by the reminder that the way Guimard tells the story, he adds a line: "He's got character but no more nonsense like that."

Joining Renault in 1980, Lemond has been prought along carefully as the team's main hope to replace Hinault, soon to turn 28. Typical of his special handling is the early end to Lemond's season, which continues for most riders through October.

Instead the Lemonds were going first to Wisconsin to visit his wife's family and to have her father, a doctor, arrange for surgery on the rider's jaw. "They're going to break my upper jaw to correct my underbite," says Lemond, who wears braces. "After about two months in La Crosse, we'll go to Nevada and then to California, where I'll train. Some cross-country skiing, a little downhill maybe, some cyclocross, maybe twice a work and some real ridering 80 to 100 kilometers, about two or three ing, 80 to 100 kilometers, about two or three hours, twice a week. We'll be based in Sacramento, where we have a condominium."

In Europe they live in Courtrai, Belgium. where we can get BBC TV in English and English magazines. A lot of people there speak English and it's convenient to France and Parwhere his team is based. Lemond says his spoken French is coming along. "I can joke with the other riders or discuss technical things with them. Otherwise I can get along but I'm not too good on verbs." He plans to hire a tutor in the United States or take night classes.

He expects to return to France in mid-February and begin team training for the next season. The Tour de France, he maists, is definitely not part of his plans before 1984 and possibiv 1985, when he will be 24. After Lemond's victory in the Tour de

L'Avenir, Hinault, amid his praise for the winner, said he did not think Lemond was "bard enough" now for the tour. "What he meant," Lemond explains, "was

I'm not hard enough yet to attack the Tour to win. You've got to be mature, physically strong to win, I think I could get 15th, maybe even be in the top 10 next year. But that's not what I want. What I want is to win the Tour de

U.S. Agency Sees No Need to Ban Oil Firm Mergers

New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — Recent mergers involving oil companies have not significantly reduced competition in the industry and a legislative ban on such combinations is "unwarranted," according to the Federal Trade Com-

Moreover, the commission said Wednesday, outlawing such mergers would tend to reduce industry efficiency by, among other things, inhibiting development of new oil supplies.

The FTC, which conducts most of the government's oil-related antitrust analysis, was responding to a request in January by congressional leaders of both parties to study the industry in light of some very large marger bids.

Among them was Mobil's unsuccessful offer for Conoco, which eventually wound up in the hands of Du Pont.

"The commission recommends against any legislative ban on oil-company mergers," the 298-page study concluded. "Such interference in normal market forces is unwarranted, both normal market forces is unwarranted, both because there have been no significant adverse implications on the state of competition in the industry from mergers, and because mergers with significant competitive impact can be satisfactorily examined under existing laws.

Commissioner Michael Pertschuk, who served as chairman in the Carter administration, disagreed with several of the findings. Although he voted to submit the report to Con-though he voted to submit the report to Congress, he preferred to call it a staff report rather than a commission study. Mr. Pertschut also called for special legislation to deal with acquisitions by large oil companies and other acquisitions by large oil companies and other major corporations.

In the waning hours of Congress last December, the House approved a bill to forbid the nine biggest oil companies to acquire any company ranked among the top 40 in the industry. This bill contained what supporters regarded as a major loophole, however, by giving either the FTC or the Justice Department, which share antitrust enforcement authority, the right to grant recognitions. the right to grant exemptions. A companion measure never came to a vote in the Senate.

Wednesday's report also rejected several other contentions of oil industry critics. It said for example, that the increase in mergers had not diverted capital from the exploration and development of new oil sources and that the cost of planning and executing acquisitions. averaging under 1 percent of the purchase price, was not unduly high.

The commission said there were numerous reasons to account for the rise in acquisitions of oil companies, a prominent one being that the doubling of oil prices in 1979 made feasible a wider use of techniques for recovering additional oil from declining fields.

The commission also said, for example, that it did not think the acquisition of Maratha Oil by U.S. Steel or of Conoco by Du Pont had raised prices or reduced oil availability.

In some cases, particularly the acquisition of Belridge Oil by Shell Oil, efficiencies seemed to result through the application of technical expertise. The commission staff said at a brid ing, however, that any such judgments of efficiencies should be left to the market and that the government should not weigh them in deciding whether a merger was anticompetitive.

Commissioner Patricia P. Bailey joined Mr. Pertschuk in questioning some of the reports conclusions but said, "I do feel comfortable with the main policy recommendation that 10 new legislation was needed. "The sheer are and momentum of these mergers calls for t

PPG Realigns Its European Team

. PPG Industries is reorganizing its European glass management to re-flect its acquisition of Boussois S.A., a French glass maker.

In April PPG bought Boussois from the BSN group, a Paris-based food products group, for $40 million. John D. Pallone, who has been named general manager of European glass operations for PPG, said the company believed its position in Europe "was rather small, and we wanted to increase this." The acquisition "makes us the No. I glass producer in the world in terms of quantity," he said.

Mr. Pallone said glass accounts for about a third of PPG's sales, which in 1981 were $3.4 billion, up 6 percent from 1980; carnings were $211.2 million, up 1 percent. Pittsburgh-based PPG makes flat glass, industrial chemicals, coatings and resins, glass fiber and other products.

Based in Paris, Mr. Pallone is responsible for overseeing PPG's European glass business, which includes flat glass production and fabrication of products for the construction and transportation industries. Mr. Pallone previously was managing director in Genoa of Vernante Pennitalia, PPG's Italian glass subsidiary.

The company moved Alfred G. Jessen into Mr. Pallone's spot. Mr. Jessen had been director of international glass operations in PPG's Pitts-

Jacques Calvet, a former banker, has been named vice chairman of the Pengeot group. Mr. Calvet, who joined the company last June, thus becomes the second-ranking official at the group level, reporting to Jean-Company insiders said the move represents a tightening of the group's direct control over the Pengeot and Citroën operations and that it is linked to emerging financial and investment strategies of the group.

Mr. Calvet formerly was president of Banque Nationale de Paris, and from 1970 to 1974 he was chief of staff to Valery Giscard d'Estaing when the former French president was finance minister.

As a hedge against property weakness, however, Hongkong Land has diversified. Earlier this year it bought holdings of 34 per-cent in both Hongkong Electric Holdings Ltd. and Hongkong Telephone Co.

Jardine has been burdened in recent years by a heavy debt load, largely piled up in an expensive stock and asset swap with Hong-kong Land in 1980, a move de-signed to defend the companies from the threat of being taken over by local Chinese interests. David Newbigging, chairman of Jardine, said the company's debt-to-equity ratio is now lower than the 72 percent at the end of last year, but he Profits from Jardine's international operations gained in the first half, especially in the Middle East, Southeast Asia and Britain, Mr. Newbigging said. Reflecting the overseas gains, he said, the contribution from Hong Kong to full-year earnings will be slightly lower than last year's 70 percent.

Jardine's activities include insurance, merchant banking, property and sugar production.

Both companies predicted higher profits for the full year. Mr. Newbigging said he expects profit growth in the second half to be similar to the 20 percent recorded in the first six months.

Hongkong Land raised its first half dividend to 14 Hong Kong cents a share from 12 cents. Jardine declared a dividend of 23 cents, up from 20.

London Uncorks A New Financial Futures Exchange

By Steven Rattner New York Times Service

LONDON - With champagne and more sedate beverages flowing freely in the galleries, the London International Financial Futures Exchange made a rancous entrance Thursday into the frenzied world of currency and interest rate trading.

While the sound of the opening bell still reverberated through the 138-year-old Royal Exchange building small groups of traders wearing brightly colored jackets began gesturing and shouting, bringing new excitement to a cavernous room on a site that first served as a marketplace in 1517.

"It's obviously a very exciting day for us," said John Barkshire, chairman of the new market and chairman of Mercantile House Holdings. "It does look as though it's got off to a good start on the first trading day."

Continuous, Worldwide Market

Initially, LIFFE (pronounced "life") will trade in only two contracts - the pound and short-term Eurodollar interest rates — for delivery in only two months, December and March. But the plan is to begin dealing quickly in yen, Swiss francs, Deutsche marks, and both short- and long-term sterling interest rates. Additional months are expected to follow shortly for all contracts. London's entrance into financial futures is particularly significant because it represents another important step toward the "internationalization" of financial markets. Traders expect London prices to mesh quickly with those on the Chicago market, and if a major financial futures market emerges in the Far East, a continuous, worldwide market would in effect

"Eventually this market will form one part of a three- or four-sided structure that will allow futures trading to take place 24 hours a day, which it can't now," said Robert Goldstein, a director of Forex Research, an advisory firm.

"It's unbelievable and mindboggling," said John Stevens, an analyst with the investment firm of Brown Baldwin Nisker in Toronto. Dome defended the plan as being in its best interest, saying in a statement from Calgary, Alberta, that it believes the deal will solve its cash flow problems.

In addition to the sale of debentures, the plan involves extending to 10 years the repayment terms of a substantial portion of Dome's debt of 7.4 billion Canadian dollars. BUSINESS BRIEFS

Hoechst Confirms Kuwaiti Stake

SOMERVILLE, New Jersey — Hoechst of West Germany confirmed Thursday through its U.S. subsidiary that Kuwait's state petroleum company has acquired a stock interest of 24 to 25 percent in Hoechst. Hoechst Chairman Rolf Sammet said the Kuwaiti company does not intend to be a silent partner but wishes to combine its strength in petroleum with Hoechst's chemical know-how and distribution network. Mr. Sammet said Hoechst's capital investment program this year is $871 million, $373 million of it outside West Germany. The capital program for next year is projected at $829 million.

Tang to Buy McLouth Steel Assets

DETROIT - McLouth Steel said Thursday that it had agreed to sell substantially all" its assets to a subsidiary of Tang Industries. The agreement is subject to approval by McLouth's secured lenders and U.S. bankruptcy court and to other conditions, a McLouth statement said.

The steel company refused to disclose the value of the transaction, saying the figure would not be available until late October after legal language for the transaction is worked out.

McLouth, which has 3,000 workers at two plants and is the 11th largest U.S. steelmaker, filed for protection under Chapter 11 of U.S. bankruptcy law last Dec. 8. Tang's subsidiary expects to continue the manufacturing, processing and sales activities of McLouth, the state-

Elf-Aquitaine, Statoil Sign Gas Deal

STAVANGER, Norway — France's Elf-Aquitaine group signed a contract Thursday with Statoil, the Norwegian state oil company, to buy about 600 million cubic meters of Norwegian natural gas a year for at least 20 years. Elf Aquitaina Norwegian Thursday least 20 years, Elf-Aquitaine Norge announced Thursday.

The Elf subsidiary noted that the deal comes on top of the gas delivery agreement that Statoil signed Sept. I with the seven-company European gas consortium for deliveries of Statfjord gas worth about 75 billion kroner ($11.1 billion) from 1986 until well beyond 2000. Elf gave no details about the sales price in the latest contract. However, a company spokesman estimated the Statfjord portion of the Elf deal at 8 billion to 10 billion kroner. Elf and Statoil also signed an agreement for deliveries of gas from two other fields, Gullfaks and Heimdal, starting in the early 1990s.

Fiat. Alfa in Joint Production Deal

TURIN - Fiat and state-owned Alfa Romeo have agreed to joint production of components for a new executive car, a Fiat spokesman said Thursday. Under an agreement to be signed in October, the two will manufacture the chassis and gearbox of a new front-wheel-drive model to be introduced in the mid-1980s. Each company will produce its own

Penney Files for Debt Security Offer

NEW YORK — J.C. Penney Co has filed a shelf registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission for $500 million of debt securities, the company said Thursday.

It said the registration will permit the company to offer all or part of the securities periodically in amounts and at prices to be determined at the time of sale, without further filing at the SEC. Net proceeds will be used for general corporate purposes, Penney said.

Grace Says 3d-Quarter Income Down

NEW YORK - W.R. Grace and Co. expects its operating income for the third quarter to be significantly below that of the same quarter last year. The company said this was due principally to a decline in use of its land-based drilling rigs and lack of improvement in conditions burting its agricultural chemicals business.

Grace made the projection in a shelf registration filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission covering $300 million of debt securities, proceeds from which are expected to be used to repay commercial paper borrowings and bank borrowings under a short-term credit facility.

Chrysler to Lower Prices Slightly

DETROIT — Chrysler will lower prices on average-equipped 1983-model cars by an average of $3, or 0.1 percent, Chrysler Vice Chairman Gerald Greenwald said Thursday. He said base model prices are being cut by an average of $70, or 0.8 percent.

Citibank Unit to Deal in Gold in U.K.

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve Board said Thursday that Citibank Overseas Investment, a subsidiary of Citibank, may act as a dealer of gold bullion on the London gold futures market.

Trading will be conducted through the corporation's subsidiary, Citi-futures Ltd. of London. Citifutures may also deal in British government bonds and Eurodollar and sterling deposit interest rate futures on the London International Financial Futures Exchange, the Fed said.

U.S. Senate Passes Landmark Bill to Aid Thrifts

By Kenneth B. Noble

New York Times Service WASHINGTON - The Senate passed landmark legislation Thurs-day to aid the United States' alling savines institutions and give them broad new investment and lending powers similar to those of com-mercial banks.

Approval of the measure, agreed on Wednesday by a Senate-House conference committee, means that the savings banks stand a strong chance of finally winning substantial federal assistance in their two-year effort to survive under the pressure of unusually high interest

The bill now goes before the House for final approval, expected before the current session of Congress ends this weekend. President Ronald Reagan is expected to sign the bill. It also contains provisions affeeting commercial banks and credit unions. In particular, it directs federal regulators to devise within two months a new type of account for commercial banks, savings banks and savings and loan associations that is "directly equivalent to and competitive with money market funds."

The action gives federal regulatory authorities the power to issue government-backed promissory notes to bolster the net worth of savings and loan associations and mutual savings banks.

For the first time, it would also permit savings institutions, includ-ing federally chartered credit unions, to make commercial and agricultural loans as well as to continue issuing the real estate mort-gages that have been their tradiional investment. Cost of Freeds

The need to bolster the assets of thrift and other financial institutions results from months of high interest rates that have pushed the cost of funds — the interest the thrift institutions pay their deposi-tors — higher than the income they have been getting from mortgages and long-term bond portfolios, most of which predate the sharp

Savings and loan associations and mutual savings banks lost $6.4 billion last year. This has pushed large numbers of associations to the brink of insolvency and has prompted an unusually high number of consolidations. At the end of last year, 801 institutions, representing $167 billion in assets, were at or below 3 percent of net worth - the amount by which assets ex-ceed liabilities. Last year also saw 296 mergers, more than double the 1980 total.

The bill approved Wednesday also contains a controversial provi-sion that would drastically restrict the transfer of older mortgages when homes were sold. The provision, which deals with "due-on-sale" clauses in home mortgage loans, would override state laws and court decisions that have re-stricted enforcement of the Many financial institutions have mortgages on homes when they are sold and issue new loans at the current high market rates, now averaging more than 15 percent. In addition, the legislation would repeal the interest rate differential that gives thrift institutions — savings banks and savings and loan associations — an advan-tage in attracting funds by being able to pay a quarter percentage point more on certain deposits than commercial banks are permitted to pay. The measure the elimination by Jan. 1, 1984, of this differential.

The measure contains many provisions of the Senate bill, spon-sored by Jake Garn, Republican of Utah, including a key provision that calls for the issuing of government-guaranteed promissory notes to bolster the net worth of faltering savings institutions.

In effect, if a thrift institution's net worth fell below a certain level, the government would add to the institution's assets by authorizing federal regulators to provide income-capital certificates, a kind of interest-bearing promissory note now used by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to bolster ailing savings and loan associations. In a reaction to Wednesday's vote, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said in a statement: "The adoption of the administration's proposals for short- and long-term assistance and the recent decline in billion Canadian dollars to Dome Energy, a Dome Petroleum subsi-diary. Dome Mines holds about 27 percent of Dome Petroleum.

The troubles of Dome, the for-mer favorite among Canadian oil companies, illustrate the hazards involved in major energy invest-ment in an era when forecasting oil demand and price is a high-risk game. Dome borrowed to exploit oil and gas, finance exploration and buy the resource-rich Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas. But oil prices declined in the receivhile interest rates soured.

first batch of statistics showed that about 65 million shares a day are traded in London, a range comparable to activity on the New York Stock Exchange, but the price per share tends to be considerably low-er than in New York.

The London Exchange had not been entirely devoid of volume fig-ures. For the past 18 years, the ex-change had issued compilations of nber of transactions and of the total value of trading. Officials the exchange believe the latter asure will remain the primary yardstick in London.

How successful LIFFE will be was hotly debated Thursday. Volume in the opening session totaled about 3,000 contracts - a considerable number — but most experts believe several months will be needed to determine whether the exchange can generate enough vol-ume or "liquidity" to serve the banks, brokers, companies and in-dividuals who would use the market to hedge and to speculate.

The concern in London was whether the lack of a tradition of futures trading and speculation as was present in Chicago would be a hindrance. Efforts to trade financial futures in New York have been mostly unsuccessful. But by some calculations, New York was hurt by its proximity to Chicago while London will be six time zones away.

"In general, I think people are looking at this as a very new and particularly difficult enterprise." id Mark Eynon, a manager at BA Futures, a Bank of America subsidiary. "There's a little bit of an education problem."

Elaborate preparations have been long under way as part of an effort to compensate for the lack of experience of London traders with futures. Training sessions have been held for three months, and practice trading has been going on for two weeks with the going on for two weeks with help of computer simulations.

Why shrewd international businessmen are buying condominiums in the cultural heart of Manhattan

Knowledgeable businessmen who travel to New York are discovering one particular advantage that can beighten their visits as no other can: owning an apartment in Manhattan, their key to enjoying the drama, culture, and financial stability of the world's capital.

And a select few of them will own such a home in Manhattan's cultural heart: at The Colonnade 57, a superior new condominium residence soaring forty-five stories above 57th Street.

A truly distinguished location, near Carnegie Hall and Lincoln Center To live at The Colonnade 57 is to live within steps of some of the world's most acclaimed cultural landmarks. Imagine: while others are busy hailing taxis, you can casually stroll to Lincoln Center, Carnegie Hall and the Theatre District. You'll live in an area of unparalleled services, among the finest galleries, dining and shopping. You'll enjoy the pleasures of a resi dence as spacious as your needs require. Many apartments command breathtak-ing vistas of Manhattan, its spectacular lights, parks, and architecture. All afford the finest appointments, including rich oak flooring and separate climate controls for every room.

Impeccable security and the proper service you deserve

Security at The Colonnade 57 is just as you want it to be: your privacy is assured, yet the security features are hardly noticeable. An advanced computer system links your apartment's front door to a central monitor supervised 24 hours a day.

door to a central monitor supervised 24 hours a day.

The moment you enter the sunlit lobby you will be greeted by a multilingual concierge, a professional in the international tradition. He will assist with travel and entertainment plans, and even

THE DESTINED HOUR

The Hostage Crisis and One Family's Ordeal By Barbara and Barry Rosen, with George Feifer. 328 pp. $17.95. Doubleday, Garden City, New York, N.Y. 11530.

Reviewed by Diane Cole

THE elements of the story remind one at first of a novel by Graham Greene: Rocked by revolution and a new religious fervor, an exotic country casts an angry eye upon the Englishspeaking foreigners and demands vengeance.

But call the country Iran, see the United States through the fanatical eyes of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, and you will begin to relive the story of the 52 Americans who were held hostage in Tehran from Nov. 4, 1979, through Jan. 20, 1981.

The book begins somewhat slowly with Rosen's description of his years with Rosen's description or ms years in Iran as a Peace Corps volunteer during the late 1960s and his subsequent graduate studies in Iranian polinics and culture. The day-by-day story of that long siege is the stuff of nightmares, and in "The Destined Hour," former hostage Barry Rosen and his parks Barbara tell their tale in harrowwife, Barbara tell their tale in harrowing, moving detail. They remind us infully that the "happy ending" of the hostages' release came after 444 days of torturous physical and emotional hardship, and that the legacy of that siege is far more than just a memory. Even now, the Rosens tell us, they are still adjusting, for the siege changed them both.

A native New Yorker, he eventually married another New Yorker, and when he returned to Tehran in 1978 as press attaché at the U.S. Embassy, the biggest conflicts Barbara and Barry Rosen thought they faced were do-mestic and religious — how to recon-cile Rosen's Jewish family with Barba-ra's Catholic family.

That perspective changed dramati-cally when Rosen and his colleagues were seized by Iranian protesters. threatened at gunpoint, handculfed, blindfolded, and imprisoned in a suc-cession of basements, cells and barred rooms. Although various clergymen and other visitors to Iran periodically brought back word to the United States that the hostages were being "treated well," Rosen's narrative should force even these optimists to think again.

In one six-month period, for instance, Rosen was allowed a total of less than one hour of outdoor exercise. Unbroken weeks of enforced silence was calculated to isolate further and demoralize the hostages, making them dependent on their captors not only for food and bathroom privileges, but for any scrap of news that hinted at their fate.

- This dependence exposed the captives to cruel games — most chill-ing on the night of Feb. 5, when pris-on guards masked like executioners woke Rosen and his cellmates, blindfolded them and lined them against the corridor wall. The guards then ordered the prisoners to drop their trou-sers, stuck gun barrels in their backs, and fired. The shots were blank, but the terror and the humiliation had hit

Playing Small Pranks

While some hostages took refuge in sleep, and others succeeded in bolstering their spirits by talking back to or playing small pranks on the Iranian guards, many, like Rosen, began to suffer the malaise of depression. Although he was never less than defiant in his attitude toward his captors, son"—herself.

Rosen endured spells of terrible anxi-Rosen endured spells of terrible anxiety. During his worst attack, he writes, "My pulse raced too fast to get a count. My heart had become a more than a year's captivity. The chila count. My neart han become a crazed pump, sending excruciating pulsations throughout my body. My limbs jerked like a pupper's, and I had no control over the terrifying throbbing in my diaphragm." Rosen was accountable given and description of the control of t eventually given antidepressant drugs to help him sleep, but an initial exami-nation by an Iranian physician yield-ed only the following diagnosis: "Your problems would disappear if your country would hand back the shah to where he belongs." Rosen's impressions of his prison guards come through vividly in their names alone — "Handcuff Man,"

"Gun Waver," "Joker," "Adolf" and so on. But other guards would provide so on. But other guards would provide be the state of the sta their prisoners with ample reading material to fill the unending hours of captivity.

A few even slipped their captives extra food and showed both compassion and courtesy. The small gestures of these few guards, however, were of these few guards, however, were not enough to prevent two hostages, from attempting suicide, or to keep others from despair.

What did keep many demons at bay, however, was the hostages' determination to give each other comfort even when they could not speak, often simply by winking or making eye contact. They further bolstered their sagging spirits through their resourcefulness in communicating news: Rosen for instance, learned of the shah's death through a message carved in a death through a message carved in a bar of soap.

While the families of the hostages obviously did not need to resort to this kind of subterfuge, they also took comfort from each other — a point made powerfully by Barbara's narra-tive, which is skillfully intercut, in al-ternating chapters, with Rosen's. Barbara's story is hardly that of one who waits passively or fretfully, as anyone who viewed her many television appearances during the months of the siege can attest. Her journey from the reserved woman who would excuse herself early from Washing ton's diplomatic parties to the force-ful, straightforward spokeswoman for her husband's cause seems to surprise — and trouble — no one more than Barbara herself.

Living with her parents, her two small children, and her sister's family in her parents' home in Brooklyn, Barbara felt at the start of the crisis that "there were too many people to talk to for me to need a psychiatrist."

Nevertheless, the stress took its toll — Nevertheless, the stress took its toll—in the long hours of her "sleep of the emotionally dead," and physically, in neck and lower back pains. An intelligent woman lacking only in selfconfidence, Barbara quickly grew disillusioned with the networks' cursory treatment of substantive issues in favor of footage of Rosen's mother weeping, for instance, or a blindfolded hostage (incorrectly identified as ed hostage (incorrectly identified as Rosen) being paraded through the embassy grounds. "It was the 'soap' of 1980," she writes of the media coverage. "Every effort was made to sell it as a continu-ing story." Rather than allow the net-works to "sell" her, however, Barbara resolved to use the media for her own purposes — not to focus attention on berself, but on ways to free the hosMarett

The many paradoxes arising from the role as activist were not lost on the role and the role and the role as activist were not lost on the role and the role her. While Rosen languished in an Iranian cell, Barbara flew to Europe to meet with Helmut Schmidt and the pope. Partially as a result of her appearances on television, she was named "Mother of the Year," although she believed that the emotion-al toll taken by her husband's plight had made her a poor model for any mother. Most ironically, she tells us with engaging candor, Rosen's long captivity forced her into a new, more independent role both professionally and in her marriage — one that she would not have forged for herself if her husband had not been taken hostage. As a result, she writes in the epi-logue dated "One Year Later," "the lasting effects of his captivity seem to

though, one year may be too short a time to evaluate the lasting effects of dren's initial wariness of their father may have disappeared, but some of Rosen's symptoms remain, as do Barbara's career conflicts and the gratitude for life mingled with sadness and guilt over the loss of the eight service-men who died in the aborted rescue mission.

Because "The Destined Hour" is more a candid report than a meditative reflection, one suspects that as their gaze slowly lifts from the past, the Rosens will begin to view Iran and North's cue-bid of three hearts was an invitation to his partner to bid four spades, and South accepted on the basis of his well-placed heart king. When West led the diamond king. East followed with the four. In the Italian method, even-spot cards are discouraging, and have a suit-preference flavor. So the four suggested a shift to clubs, the lower ranking side suit. If East had wanted a heart shift she would have played the diamond ten.

West dutifully shifted to a club, and South was on the spot when he won with the ace in dummy. Knowing that West held the A-K of diamonds originally, he not unreasonably concluded that East must have both missing

NFL Ponders Various Ways to Revise Schedule

SPORTS BRIEFS

Austin Extended in Indoor Tourney

PHILADELPHIA - Tracy Austin, the top seed, overcame a formidable challenge Wednesday night to defeat Sharon Walsh, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4, in the second round of the U.S. Women's Indoor Tennis Championships. Reaching the quarterfinals with Austin were Susan Mascarin, who upset Andrea Leand, 6-3, 6-1; Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia, who defeated Anna Fernandez, 6-2, 6-2, and Barbara Potter, who beat Kim Jones, 7-5, 6-1. The other quarterfinalists were to be decided Thursday.

Walsh made a dramatic charge in the third set after being down, 0-4 and 1-5, to pull within 4-5 by taking 11 straight points.

Strachan Jailed 3 Years for Drug Use NEW ORLEANS - Mike Strachan, a former National Football League running back, has been sentenced in U.S. District Court to serve three years in a federal penitentiary on cocaine charges. "I'm quite upset about it. I don't think it was fair at all," Strachan said Wednesday, asserting that he did nothing that George Rogers, Chuck

Muncie, Frank Warren and Dave Waymer had not also done. Strachan was a teammate of the four during his six seasons with New Orleans. Walton Rejoins Clippers Part-Time

PORTLAND, Oregon - Bill Walton, the 6-foot-11 center who led the Portland Trail Blazers to the National Basketball Association championship in 1977, will play part-time for the San Diego Clippers this fall, according to Ted Podleski, the Clipper general manager.

In an interview with The Oregonian newspaper, Podleski said: "We want to go slow and hope that in January he can play three times a week." Walton has suffered foot injuries since the 1977-78 season.

Barnes to Play for New Detroit Team

DETROIT - Marvin Barnes, the 6-foot-9, 225-pound forward who once spent a year in prison for violating parole, has signed a contract to play the 1982-83 season for the newly formed Detroit Spirits of the Continental Basketball Association, the club announced Wednesday. It will mark the second time the 30-year-old Barnes has played in Detroit. In 1976 the Detroit Pistons of the NBA purchased Barnes in the American Basketball Association dispersal draft.

The Masculine 'Weepie'

By Russell Baker

NEW YORK — The popular success of "Chariots of Fire," a sentimental film about young men striving to become Olympic champions, puzzled me until an Englishman pointed out that the explanation is quite simple. "It's a male weepie," he said. Of course. As masters of popular entertainment have always known, men in the audience like a good cry just as much as the women do. The difference is that men don't like to sob out loud. It embarrasses them, so they prefer something that makes them cry silently but doesn't reduce them to watery convulsions.

The well-made "male weepie" produces in the male that chokedup sensation in the chest called "a lump in the throat." "Chariots of Fire" gave me "a lump in the throat," and I'm not ashamed to admit it. If it had pushed sen-timentality too far and reduced me to copious tears, I would have de-tested it. Wanting to cry was a del-icious sensation; being pressed for outright sobs would have offended me, and I might have left the theater feeling the movie was ridicu-

Oscar Wilde spoke for the male attitude toward "weepies" when, writing of one of Dickens' tearstained passages about the death of a cardboard heroine, he said that only a person with a heart of stone could read it without laugh-

I used to have the same response to female "weepies" — also known as "four-handkerchief movies" in which Barbara Stanwyck or Bette Davis or Joan Crawford had the women in the theater wailing damply in the dark. While all around me trembled with sorrow, I

Those who say men would be healthier if they wept with less restraint may have a good point, but whether venting gales of tears at the movie house improves the hygiene is another question.

Still, the male pleasure in feeling a lump in the throat is undeniable. Moviemakers of the old school al-ways understood it, always knew that men wanted to feel like crying without being brought to sobs, and cunningly exploited this hanger. When John Wayne, the ultimate scene in which his troopers presented him with a watch at the final muster, then focused the camera on Duke's face fighting to hold back the tears, while every man in the audience felt that delightful lump rising in his throat. If Duke had sobbed, we would all have started to sob and hated it and started to giggle, but the director

In recent years when films be-came technically and, often, artis-tically better, the lump-in-thethroat effect was no longer much sought. Maybe movie people thought it was too easy, too cheap. new movies, the audience was most often detached from the emotional turmoil of the characters. You can watch Clint Eastwood, knew where to stop.

Marlon Brando, even Burt Rey-nolds with fascination, as a scientist might study his specimens, but it's hard to feel much kinship with the characters they play.

In these movies there is a great deal of blood, gallons of blood, but it never seems to me as terrible as the tiny droplets of blood glimpsed briefly when John Wayne or Gary Cooper bled. In fact it doesn't seem like blood at all. It seems more like ichor, the inhuman substance that flowed in the arteries of the gods.

The box-office success of "An Officer and a Gentleman" in the United States this summer has interested the movie reviewers precisely because it is such an unmodern film. Except for the newfangled obligatory sex scenes, it is pure 1943. It tells you what it's going to tell you; then it tells you; then it tells you what it's told you. The audience knows what is going to happen from start to fin-ish. We know that Mayo, the rat with women, will undergo redemption, learn humility, and marry the good woman. They don't make movies like this anymore, and maybe they shouldn't, yet audiences love it. Why? Well, it raises a lump in the throat, just as "Chariots of Fire" did. It's a "male weep-suppose the success of these two films will tempt a lot of movie people and we'll see a run of new shows catering to the rediscovery of the fact that men like to feel the tears rise as much as women do. The trick will be to keep those alling.

A 'Doll's' Death

By Michiko Kakutani

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Like too many theater stories, it was a story of expectation and failure, hope and disappointment. What made Sunday's closing of "A Doll's Life" different was not simply that the Broadway season's first major musical had run for only five performances in four days and cost its producers

$4 million, but that it had involved three of Broadway's most gifted and successful artists: the innovative director and producer

Harold Prince, and the celebrated libretto team of Betty Comden

Only hours before the opening Sept. 23, things had seemed so much brighter. Assembled at the Mark Hellinger Theater for a last rehearsal, the company presented Prince, Comden, Green and the company at the company at the company with composer, Larry Grossman, with opening-night presents and stood to appland their work.

For Comden and Green, "A Doll's Life" — a kind of musical sequel to Ibsen's "A Doll's House" — represented a "big step," a venture into more serious subject matter than before. For Prince, it was a special show, a show he said he loved.

Reason for Optimism

be expectant, even buoyant. "A Doll's Life," after all, marked the reunion of the team that had collaborated in 1978 on the Tonyaward winning "On the 20th-Century," and while Prince's last show, "Merrily We Roll Along," had run for only 16 performances, his record in both artistic and commercial terms has been rewunderkind, Prince had demon-strated a brilliant mastery of craft, pioneering the notion of the so-called "concept" musical. With such shows as "Cabaret," "Company" and "Sweeney Todd," he had not only stretched, but also helped redefine the American musical. In 1980, when

Comden and Green - themselves veterans of many hit shows and film musicals — first came to him, Prince eagerly embraced their idea of a musical that would tured role was recast, a scene was cat, specific references to Ibsen were removed, and new endings were removed, and new entings were tried. Although the writers had at first envisioned an inti-mate portrait of Nora, that story gradually assumed more symbolc proportions.

After 6½ weeks of rehearsal, the company moved to Los Angeles, and on June 15, the show opened at the Ahmanson Theater to negative reviews. Dan Sullivan, wrote in the Los Angeles Times that the show "may be the worst thing that has happened to [Ibsen's] play since the Germans demanded a the 1820e "

Though disappointing, the reviews, as Green noted, "didn't shake our belief in the show one iota." Arguing that Los Angeles critics and audiences could not accurately forecast Broadway reaction, the show's collaborators decided against making the kind of substantial changes that were made in the final stages of "Merrily." The important thing, they argued, was to remain faithful to their original vision.

Favorable Signs Prince's faith was bolstered by a favorable review in Variety. Even more encouraging, he noted, were comments of prominent New York visitors. And so for the next five weeks, Prince and company worked on their idea of a musical that would trace Nora's adventures after she slams Ibsen's famous door.

Rehearsals began April 19, and during the next few weeks, a feathat cast members needed time to settle into their roles. Arguing that a vacation would give him a fresh perspective, Prince left for Majorca. "Everyone," he re-Majorca. "Everyone," he re-called, "said, "How can he leave a show in trouble?" But the truth is think we did our work in those first five weeks."

Meanwhile, even though tickets had been sold as a part of the Civic Light Opera subscription, business was poor. The average weekly revenues hovered around $113,000, out of a possible $316,328, resulting in a loss of about $100,000 a week for 10 weeks.

Anxious but Optimistic

When Prince and the show's writers returned after five weeks, they felt that things had some-how, magically, fallen into place. Eager to avoid extra expenses, Prince cut the show's California run by two weeks and on Sept. 8
"A Doll's Life" began previews in New York. The reaction of the audiences, the cast members felt, was sympathetic, and they went into opening night anxious but Unfortunately, it soon became apparent that "A Doll's Life" was not what the critics wanted In The New York Times, Frank Rich, for instance, described it as a well-intentioned show "that collapses in its prologue and then skids into a toboggan slide from which there is no return" - and the next morning it was an-nounced that the show would close following the Sunday matinee. After so much work and such investment of faith, the almost unanimously poor reviews came as a terrible shock. What went wrong? Was it poor judgment, myopic optimism or just ill timing and bad luck? If some critics believed that a workshop production would have helped, others argued that con-certed efforts might have salvaged the show in California. Some questioned the quality of the music and staging, while others wondered about the casting of a little-known actress as Nora.

Still others contended that no one could have saved the show, that the idea was simply a bad one from the start. How, they asked, could one hope to base a musical on Ibsen and the issue of feminism? And yet, similar ques-tions might have been asked of earlier Prince efforts: certainly shows based on an Argentine dictator and a murderous barber must have seemed equally incon-gruous — until "Evita" and Sweeney Todd" became hits.

In any case, artists as gifted as those involved with "A Doll's Life" will soon go on to other projects. There will be other chances to create the great American umsical. As he was leaving the theater on opening night, Green noted that he was planning to "get back to work" after relaxing for a day or two. Grossman has a show opening in Boston this week, and another musi-cal in the works, And Prince said he would take one day off, then get to work with Beverly Sills on a new version of "Candide."

DiMaggio Ends Rose

Joe DiMaggio, the former base-ball great, who was married for three years to Manilyn Mouroe, has ended a 20-year standing order for thrice-weekly delivery of roses to her pink crypt in Los Angeles.

Bob Alhanati, a co-owner of Parisian Florist, the Hollywood shop that has filled the order since the star's drug overdose death in August 1962, said DiMaggio ended the deliveries Sept. 1. "He called a mutual friend of ours and just said be wanted to stop sending the flo-wers," Alhanati said. "He gave no explanation." Upon learning of DiMaggio's decision, the film pro-ducer Robert Slatzer, 55, who claims he was secretly married to Monroe for less than a week in October 1952 but that the documents were destroyed, placed an order for weekly delivery of three roses, Alhanan said. Slatzer, 55, said he arranged to be billed once a year and would have his will modified to assure the roses are sent even after he dies. "I took over pretty much where DiMaggio left off," Slatzer said. "The fact is I was already going out there with flowers about every two weeks."

Eldridge Cleaver, a former leader of the radical Black Panthers, was heckled by students at College Park, Maryland, as he urged them to reject communism and mili-tance for belief in God and America. His visit to the University of Maryland, sponsored by a student group affiliated with the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church, sparked protests from members of the campus Black Student Union. The Maryland lecture was the first stop of a projected 60-college tour Cleaver is making for the Collegiate Associa-tion for the Research of Principles, an offshoot of the Unification Church. Students interrupted Cleaver's lecture with shouts of "Uncle Tom" and epithets.
